A Post-war Aspect . . .

Considering the extent of government war borrowing there is a feeling of uncertainty among many people as to how the palpably necessary social and reconstruction programs which must follow the arrival of peace can be financed. These people, while realizing that the govern- GOOD SCORES ment must borrow money if there are to be any post-war plans effected by free Canadians, recall also that in the IN SHOOTING depressed years before the war the government's stock defence against the importunities of those who would Men of "B" Company Acquit Themhave the jobless re-employed in national development work was that plans extensive enough to embrace all the unemployed would put the country in debt and raise taxation to hopeless levels.

In those days there was no powerful voice to foretell Company of the Prince Rupert cult number but they brought the value that ten years of planned development work might have become to Canada in her present stress. Even day. There was a goodly number themselves. Dainty Marie Boulter year out of amateur ranks, surthose who were most clamorous for "work and wages" or marksmen out. rarely lifted their eyes above that urgent horizon to assess their claims in terms of Canada's future benefit. We know now that in the comparative leisure of the '30's Corp. A. W. Allaire there might have been built many of the projects which Lieut. A. Deildal at present the country is trying to complete in a few corp W. A. Smith months out of sheer urgent necessity. But it was not done. Sergeant S. C. Elkins

And now many people are wondering how the same Pte. C. King government which, with its comparatively picayune pre- Lieut. Col. G. C. Oswell war obligations could not relieve the distress of its peo- Lieut. G. D. Bryant ple, can hope to advance them while hampered by its in- Pte. A. W. Ferguson evitably mountainous post-war debt.

There are probably as many solutions to this problem Corp E. Garner Coy. Sergt. Major Kennedy as there are self-appointed economists in the land. Some Pte. J. L. Wrathall claim that no organized social program can mature Pte. P. J. Peterson while the money that should feed it is paying off war Pte. A. Barbe obligations and that thus our grandchildren will not have a full chance to pioneer the bright new world that should belong to the immediate post-war generation. Since this is the rankest sort of defeatism it is not worthy of comment. There is, however, another view which is as rosy as the first is black.

All the others that have come to hand have either been extensions of the first, or modifications of the second. It might even be unwise to say that post-war conditions will settle somewhere between the two.

Exponents of this second viewpoint claim that, since New York the government has not borrowed outside the nation, by Chicago accepting lend-lease or other foreign credits, the money is owed to the people of Canada, and is, therefore not New York really a debt. Since it is owed by the government to its Washington own people it is an asset and there need be no urgency Philadelphia in reducing it while there is reconstruction work to be Boston done. The existence of this asset will have a stabilizing cleveland effect during the extended unsettled period following the Chicago war, they claim. Interest payments and maturity dates St. Louis can be met by a series of refundings which in no way will endanger popular confidence in the asset itself.

Such a plan arrives at the ultimate in capitalist misreasoning by assuming that people will do more for themselves if they have money invested in themselves than if their endeavors were prompted merely by such elemental needs as decency, security and freedom.

What plans will be worked out and followed by the post-war leaders cannot be known but what can be known and must be affirmed and re-affirmed is that, whatever its leadership, there can be little hope for Canada unless its people have an unshakeable faith in their own bright future.

Revelstoke By-election . . .

The result of the provincial by-election yesterday at Revelstoke in which the C.C.F. candidate captured the seat from the coalition government will, of course, be construed by the C.C.F. as a sign of the political times in British Columbia. There is definite feeling in the air favoring a change from the old political lines. Indeed, it was in such a very feeling that the coalition government itself was conceived. The lesson from Revelstoke is that anything smacking of the old political way of doing things is still unpopular.

We have said before and we suggest again that the C.C.F., if it ever did get into power, would probably be just as political a government as any of the ones that would have preceded it. However, it is now accepted as the party of change, and, as feeling pervades the air these days, it is receiving the benefit of such an atmosphere.

These are times of expansionary feelings and things reactionary, or which even have the taint of reaction, are much in disfavor. Possibly there were other factors than those of provincial issue which had a bearing on Revelstoke.

Because of military requirements your favorite Leckie Shoes are going to have to last you longer Here are a few hints on how to doit: Always keep shoes clean and well-polished.

Don't expose them to excessive heat. If damp, it's better to allow them to dry at room temperature, as strong heat makes leather brittle and it's likely to crack. Insert trees into your shoes as soon as you take them off.

ney Alexander proposed a toast to the King. May Skinner then offered a toast to the School. Miss Handford, the class teacher, spoke a few words to the class, to which Ted Capstick replied. Closing the first part of the evening was a short address to the graduates by Mr. O'Neill.

At the close of the dance, three cheers were given for Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill. Three cheers were also given for Bob Long, a member of the class, who was unable to be present. The affair closed with the singing of "God Save The King" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Those present included the graduates and ex-graduates together with the members of the teaching staff and their wives.

During the evening, group pictures of the class were taken by Harry Lee, a former student.
