National Selective Service . . .

News of the decision of the federal government to reorganize National Selective Service is welcome. Certainly it is high time something was done to make its function simpler and more expeditious. There have been numerous complaints from one end of cooking at a Canadian Womof the country to the other for a long time now on en's Army Corps barracks in the unpracticability and incompatibility not only of some of the measures themselves but of the manner of Canadian women such as Three members representing British motor boats lost, but the measures themselves but of the manner of Canadian women such as Three members representing British motor boats lost, but native votes are not included crews saved. These circumstances will emphasize the direct relationship between the purchase of bonds by citizens at home and the fight being waged by our citizens abroad.
