Amateur Light Wiring . . .

DAILY EDITION

The case of a fire in the attic of a house, caused "freezing" stocks of canned vegby an amateur job of light wiring, is only a mild etables is working no hardship suggestion of what might have resulted from this on the average housewife, says Manager D. B. Borland and particular type of false economy.

Happily the damage in that particular case was jour cottage cheese—so good negligible but the fact that the result was unimpor- with salads and a grand base tant does not detract from the seriousness of its for lunch box sandwiches-can cause.

Installing light wires in buildings is a trade and is a job for a tradesman and, only when a house owner has had the job done by a competent electrician, has he reason to believe that the job has been done right.

According to Fire Chief Lock there are a number of houses in the city whose wiring was done by amateurs. Those houses constitute a fire menace, which, unlike the one Saturday, may not result only in a few charred rafters, but in the charred bodies of their inmates.

It is the duty of every householder to make certain that his house is free of this source of danger.

Food and Cost of Living ...

When family living costs are mentioned, the mistress of the household thinks immediately of food prices. This is natural because foods are the largest single item in the wage earner's family budget. During the past year or two the lady of the household with salt and pepper and moisthas found a growing strain on her purse strings en with a little top milk or caused by the higher prices of foods. However, goods cream. are only one of the items really involved in the cost of living.

In calculating cost of living one must consider not only foods, but fuel and lighting, rent, clothing, home furnishings, and a miscellaneous group of items, including health costs, items of personal care, recreation, transportation and life insurance. Every day of the year, money is being spent on these things and the cost of living picture would be incomplete if they were omitted from it.
