TURNED AGAINST ITS FORMER MASTERS

Members of a British coastal defence unit shown manning a captured Axis anti-aircraft gun which defended the harbor installations at Syracuse, Sicily. The guns were in perfect working order when taken and now stretch protective arms over the Allied shipping which may be seen jamming the captured harbor.

Perry Report and Shipbuilding . . .

"The Perry Report is not easy to read," says Francis R. Turnley, editor of the publication of a Vancouver engineering concern. "Six hundred pages without an index is like a feast without forks—but it is a feast and warrants far more attention than it has received."

"When the Act was passed in February, 1942, authorizing not more than twelve persons, including the chairman, to consider advance planning of rehabilitation measures, industrial reorganization and employment projects designed to meet postwar conditions, it was the signal for Hon. H. G. T. Perry, chairman, and his committee to pose the following simple question to the people of British Columbia: If you had a wish what would it be?"

"They were both astonished and encouraged" by the resulting answers. Hundreds of organized bodies and individuals came forward with clear-cut replies, all outlining some local or provincial postwar dream that, in their opinion, should be made reality with the least of delay.

"The schemes range over hundreds of activities, including the growing of beets, peanuts, gathering dandelion roots, building ball parks and stadiums, restoring the forests, utilizing the lignin in pulpwood, lowering taxes, establishing textile mills and the establishment of a steel mill on the Pacific Coast. Two groups—recommended continuation of the shipbuilding industry.

"The committee itself, in its own detailed reports, has little to say about shipbuilding. Perhaps the problem looks too large.

"From there on Mr. Turnley's article goes on to discuss the possibilities in British Columbia after the war, suggesting how this might fit in with the steel mill proposal for this coast.

"Shipbuilding is now our largest industry. We have everything to carry the business into the peace, except steel and engines and a market for the ships. We have plenty of iron ore, coking coal and limestone to make steel with; we have vast electrical resources, an all-year moderate climate and 45,000 men and women who now build ships and build them well.

"A lot of people besides those working on the ships have an interest in this matter. Jobs are at stake, tens of thousands of jobs, and, if this is a democracy, we should not have to cringe in fear of eastern steel being 'dumped' here to thwart our rightful industrial needs.

"The world will need ships and British Columbia might as well be building a goodly share of them. Right now Canada is building as many merchant vessels as the United Kingdom.

"Can't we find a place for our B.C. built ships somewhere in this (postwar) competition or perhaps we can end the competition by sensible common agreement and still build ships."

Bombing of Berlin . . .

The disinclination of the Allies to put a great amount of credence in the announcements that the government of the Reich has been removed from Berlin to other and safer cities, is doubtless based on a thorough understanding of the German propaganda machine. However, there is no reason to doubt that many non-essential civilians have been evacuated from the capital. This became necessary when the residents of Berlin heard of what happened to Hamburg. They were seized with panic and there is reason to believe that the government acted because the residents of Berlin were leaving the city in disorderly throngs, disrupting railway and highway services. Fear of Berlin being blotted out, like Hamburg and the cities of the Ruhr and Rhine Valleys, started the rush to other cities and towns more removed from possible bombing attacks and the rush continues.

Six-year old John Barratt won a competition from R.A.F. and U.S. airmen in spotting and recognizing 80 types of aircraft.

Ontario Regt. Holds Dance

About two hundred men of the Ontario Regiment, Y.M.C.A. hostesses and members of the C.W.A.C. attended a dance Thursday night at the Ontario regiment hall. The dance was arranged by Capt. Smith, regimental entertainment officer, and the Y.M.C.A., and the regimental orchestra supplied the music.

In spite of the fact that as usual there were not enough hostesses and C.W.A.C.'s to go round, a fine time was enjoyed in the "air conditioned" hall.

A most amusing sign decorates the portals of that hall. It reads—"Muskeg Theatre—Air conditioned—No smoking in the balcony or in the orchestra—Ladies admitted free—also men in uniform."

Since the architect maliciously left out a balcony when he designed the hall there will obviously be no one caught smoking there and, as for the air conditioning, it is the complicated product of an engineering mind which conceived the idea of cutting several holes high the the walls.

People of the Gold Coast have sent £30,000 (135,000) to Britain to buy fighter aircraft. Their latest donation brings the total contribution to £140,000 (630,000.)

MIXED METAPHORS!

THAT MEANS TWO YEARS SERVICE!

"Yes, girls—two years ago I was wondering just like you are, what life would be like in the CWAC. Today I can tell you it's a grand life for any girl."

"The Canadian Women's Army Corps offers you a chance to travel and see new places, meet new friends, and enjoy comradeship that you never find in civilian life. You'll be healthier because of the healthful routine and good food and quarters, and you'll be happier with that feeling of doing something really useful in the war effort."

The CWAC has achieved a splendid reputation for efficiency and performance in every way. More girls are needed urgently. If you are 18 to 45, physically fit, single or married without dependents, don't miss the great adventure of serving in the CWAC.
