Million Pounds of Halibut Landed Here This Week—Dogfish and Shark Liver Prices Lowered

Prince Rupert has just had a million pound halibut week as large vessels of the American fleet continued to run in from the banks to market catches at the 17.5c and 16c ceiling price, thus eliminating the long haul southward to Seattle. The week's landings at Prince Rupert totalled 998,000 pounds of which all but 40,000 from a lone Canadian boat was from American bottoms. Twenty-one American boats in all landed catches during the week. This brought the grand total of landings at Prince Rupert for the 1943 season to date up to 9,842,700 pounds as compared with 11,085,019 pounds at the corresponding date a year ago. The Canadian total for this year is now 4,103,700 pounds compared with 3,368,219 pounds and the American total 5,739,000 pounds as against 7,216,800 pounds last year.

Maximum prices at which processors of dogfish liver oil or mudshark liver oil may sell their product for domestic consumption have been set in an order announced by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. As from July 1 this year, every producer of these oils will be contributing about one-third of his production to Canadian requirements. As a result of these actions, prices paid for dogfish and dogfish livers will be somewhat less. Designed to simplify and standardize the price structure for these products, which are used extensively for pharmaceutical purposes and for fortifying vitamin oils, the order fixes prices at those of the basic price ceiling period but in no case exceeding prices established by the order on the basis of vitamin A potency range. In order to conserve the base oil used in feeding oils, low potency dogfish liver oil and mudshark liver oil will be used in Canada.

The Experts Say - - -

CANNING CURRANTS—Lucky the housewife whose garden boasts a few currant bushes, or who is able to buy either red or black currants, says Laura Pepper, chief of the Agricultural Department's consumer section. She suggests that black currant juice should be put up because of its excellence as a source of vitamin "C," or that the fruit be canned with or without sugar. To make the juice, wash and stem the currants. Measure into preserving kettle, crush, and add two cups water to three cups currants. Bring to boil and boil five minutes. Strain through a jelly bag, pour into sterilized sealers, partially seal and process in hot water bath at simmering temperature for 30 minutes. Remove from water bath and complete seal.

VALUABLE VITAMIN—Most garden fruits supply vitamin "C" abundantly at this time of year, but right now currants are at the top of the list, and Marion Harlow of nutrition services reminds homemakers that 1-3 cup of this tangy fruit, crushed and sweetened just before a serving, yields as much vitamin "C" as you'll get from a medium-sized orange.

LUNCH BOXES—Here's a suggestion for a lunch box for war workers: ice-cold tomato juice; tomato juice and milk, half and half; or fruit juice for the thermos bottle these hot days. Crisp radishes and onions from the Victory garden add tang and vitamins—and for the next three months there'll be a good variety of fresh fruits that are easy to pack and carry.

DOBBIN'S CONTRIBUTION—Farmer's wives can "do their bit" for victory by seeing that beef, the only difference between sirloin or stew.

SIRLOIN OR STEW—Ration coupon value charts play on favorites. Sunday's sirloin or Monday's stew—it adds up to the same amount of meat, no matter which one the cook decides upon. A ration coupon entitles the holder to three-quarters of a pound of sirloin or three-quarters of a pound of boneless stew-beef, the only difference between

SHIRLEY IS GROWN UP

Goldilocks of Screen Has Turned Into Junior Miss and Has Boy Friends

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD, July 24 (P)—It wasn't at all like old times. It was a little sad, come to think of it. Shirley Temple and yours truly are both getting on.

Take the first time we met. The first thing she did then was to toss her 56 curls—you could count 'em—merrily, put a trusting, deeply affectionate look in her big brown eyes, and clamber on my knee. This was a procedure that inevitably made me her personal slave long before she became Hollywood's No. 1 star, especially after she cuddled closer and whispered a few sweet nothings about her dolls, her big brothers, and her mummy and daddy.

And then you take today. Shirley came downstairs to the big living room of her Brentwood home, where I was sitting with her mother hashing over old times. Shirley smiled, shook hands, said "How do you do?" and sat down on a divan beside Mamma. She didn't toss her curls—those are gone now and there's just a massive halo of chestnut waves instead—and she didn't look trusting, and she didn't clamber on my knee, which though a bit rheumatic was certainly ready for anything.

Poised Young Lady

Shirley sat there, and smiled—a poised young lady of 15. Behind her, over the piano was an oil painting of the 56-curl Shirley that was. There was quite a difference. Goldilocks had turned into a Junior Miss. And she had things on her mind—important things. Immediately, the school dance.

Shirley will be a junior next September at the Westlake School for Girls. Once, for four straight years, she may have been box office queen of Hollywood, but today she was just a kid with a job to do and excitement in the air. She was on the program committee—or was it refreshments? I forgot which, but Shirley wouldn't.

Both Shirley and her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Temple, said they were happy over Shirley's newest movie contract. She has signed with David O. Selznick, and Selznick is the producer who, by carefully selecting vehicles, put over Joan Fontaine, Ingrid Bergman, Vivien Leigh, Jennifer Jones and other of his contract people. Shirley's first film will be "Since You Went Away," the story by Margaret Buell Wilder. She'll play Brig, the younger daughter.

"She'll be one of three stars in the picture," said Mrs. Temple, "and that's wonderful—it's the first time she hasn't been expected to carry a picture by herself. We've waited for years for this."

But Chaperoned

Lately Shirley has done two films, "Kathleen" and "Miss Annie Rooney," the former unsensational, the latter unfortunate. She has also done some radio work. Even in idleness, she is in no danger of poverty—ing in the price. Sirloin rubs shoulders with stewing beef only by virtue of the edible meat contained in each.

her father, George Temple, a former banker, soaked away large quantities of her earnings in trust funds and annuities. Shirley has had stage offers, but—
"I'd like to wait until I'm out of high school before I try a play," said Shirley. Also she wants to go to college between pictures.
