MINING COMING BACK

THE MINING INDUSTRY is on the comeback throughout northern and central British Columbia. During recent weeks the Daily News has been telling about the resumption of activities on many properties in the Portland Canal area. There are important operations on the make at Anyox. Yesterday we had the interesting announcement of plans to reopen the famous Duthie mine on Hudson's Bay Mountain near Smithers which has not seen operation in sixteen years. The program on the Duthie mine is, doubtless, but the forerunner of other widespread resumed mining activity in the interior.

Seemingly mining is making the quickest postwar comeback in this area of all the lines of basic industry. It is very encouraging, particularly to Prince Rupert, the centre of it all.

MORALE BUILDERS

OVERWORKED as the word "morale" has been during the war it is not amiss to use it again in view of the disturbed state which has developed in all phases of society in this period of post-war adjustment, says the Salvation Army's Red Shield Report.

During the war great efforts were made to maintain the morale of the armed forces. Psychiatrists, psychologists, auxiliary services, entertainment and theatrical parties, sports and games organizations served in morale building.

Peace has its morale problems as pressing as those of war. The high hopes of the people for a new era of peace have suffered a collapse and instead they face industrial strife, greed and avarice; instead of international tolerance, there is quarreling, distressingly exhibited in the open, to create fear of another war and next time, one of atomic destruction.

In this day the public needs the services of morale builders extraordinary. Not the empty, shallow, so-called morale building used so much in the war—the mere thought-changing, forgetfulness-inducing escape-giving amusements or vices so often recommended—but something that faces facts and yet establishes the mind and spirit in hope and confident assurance that all these disturbances and threats will pass, and that the future shines bright with the first rays of a New Day for the world.

SPIRITUAL VALUES

"WE NEED a new enlightenment to reassert the spiritual life of man and to re-interpret it once more in spiritual terms. Such a movement will release the great moral forces of our time, which are led astray by the false and degrading theories of man's nature. It should redeem all the patriotic devotion corrupted today into Fascism, and it should, above all, set free the great craving for brotherhood and social justice which is harnessed today to the engines of class war. If only we could persuade good men to believe again in goodness, and generous men to trust once more in the force of generous sentiments, a peaceful world would arise even today." —Professor Michael Polanyi.

Urges Patience, Tolerance for World Security

An appeal for "patience, tolerance and discipline" in world and national levels was sounded by H. G. Perry before the Rotary Club Thursday afternoon in a speech which assessed the background and the value of the United Nations Organization as a factor for future world security.

Mr. Perry saw it as the "beginning of a great epoch and a great achievement in the history of the world when 49 nations signed that charter." He warned, however, against disintegrating forces which threaten the pathway of the United Nations.

"We have in this charter the image of the future but already we know that there are doubts, discords and fears even among the members who signed that historic document," he declared. "A great disintegration appears to be settling in and is reflected in our international situation and in the great economic paralysis that has beset even this nation."

He compared the present picture with the attitude of the democratic world when the incipient United Nations first met a year ago at Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco to create the form and document the objectives of the world organization. "Even at that time, although victory was not yet achieved, we could look forward with great hope and feel that we would tread the fine pathway to a peaceful earth. In spite of the disappointments of the past year, the United Nations still has a chance to achieve its lofty purposes."

Mr. Perry read the preamble to the United Nations' charter, describing it as the produce of the best political thinkers of the world who have grasped the image and set out to achieve the purpose of world security.

During the last year, he said, in which the United Nations have been beset by disputes, the "patience and restraint of Great Britain and the United States have saved the situation and retained for us the hope that this charter shall be made effective and preserved.

"We must cultivate that patience and tolerance, and attempt to understand our opponents in these disputes. Otherwise there might be another war which would lead to the destruction of mankind," Mr. Perry asserted.

He warned of the disintegrating forces at work within nations, as well as between nations, and urged understanding of the basic changes which are taking place in the world order.

"Let us realize that changes are here in the social and economic order. Let us understand and accept these changes so that our world does not disintegrate, then re-integrate again in totalitarian form," he suggested.

He appealed for a spirit of universalism and discipline, both in business and labor organizations, so that small, militant groups cannot get control for their own purposes.

TALK ABOUT CONVENTIONS

Junior Chamber of Commerce Taking Part in Various Gatherings

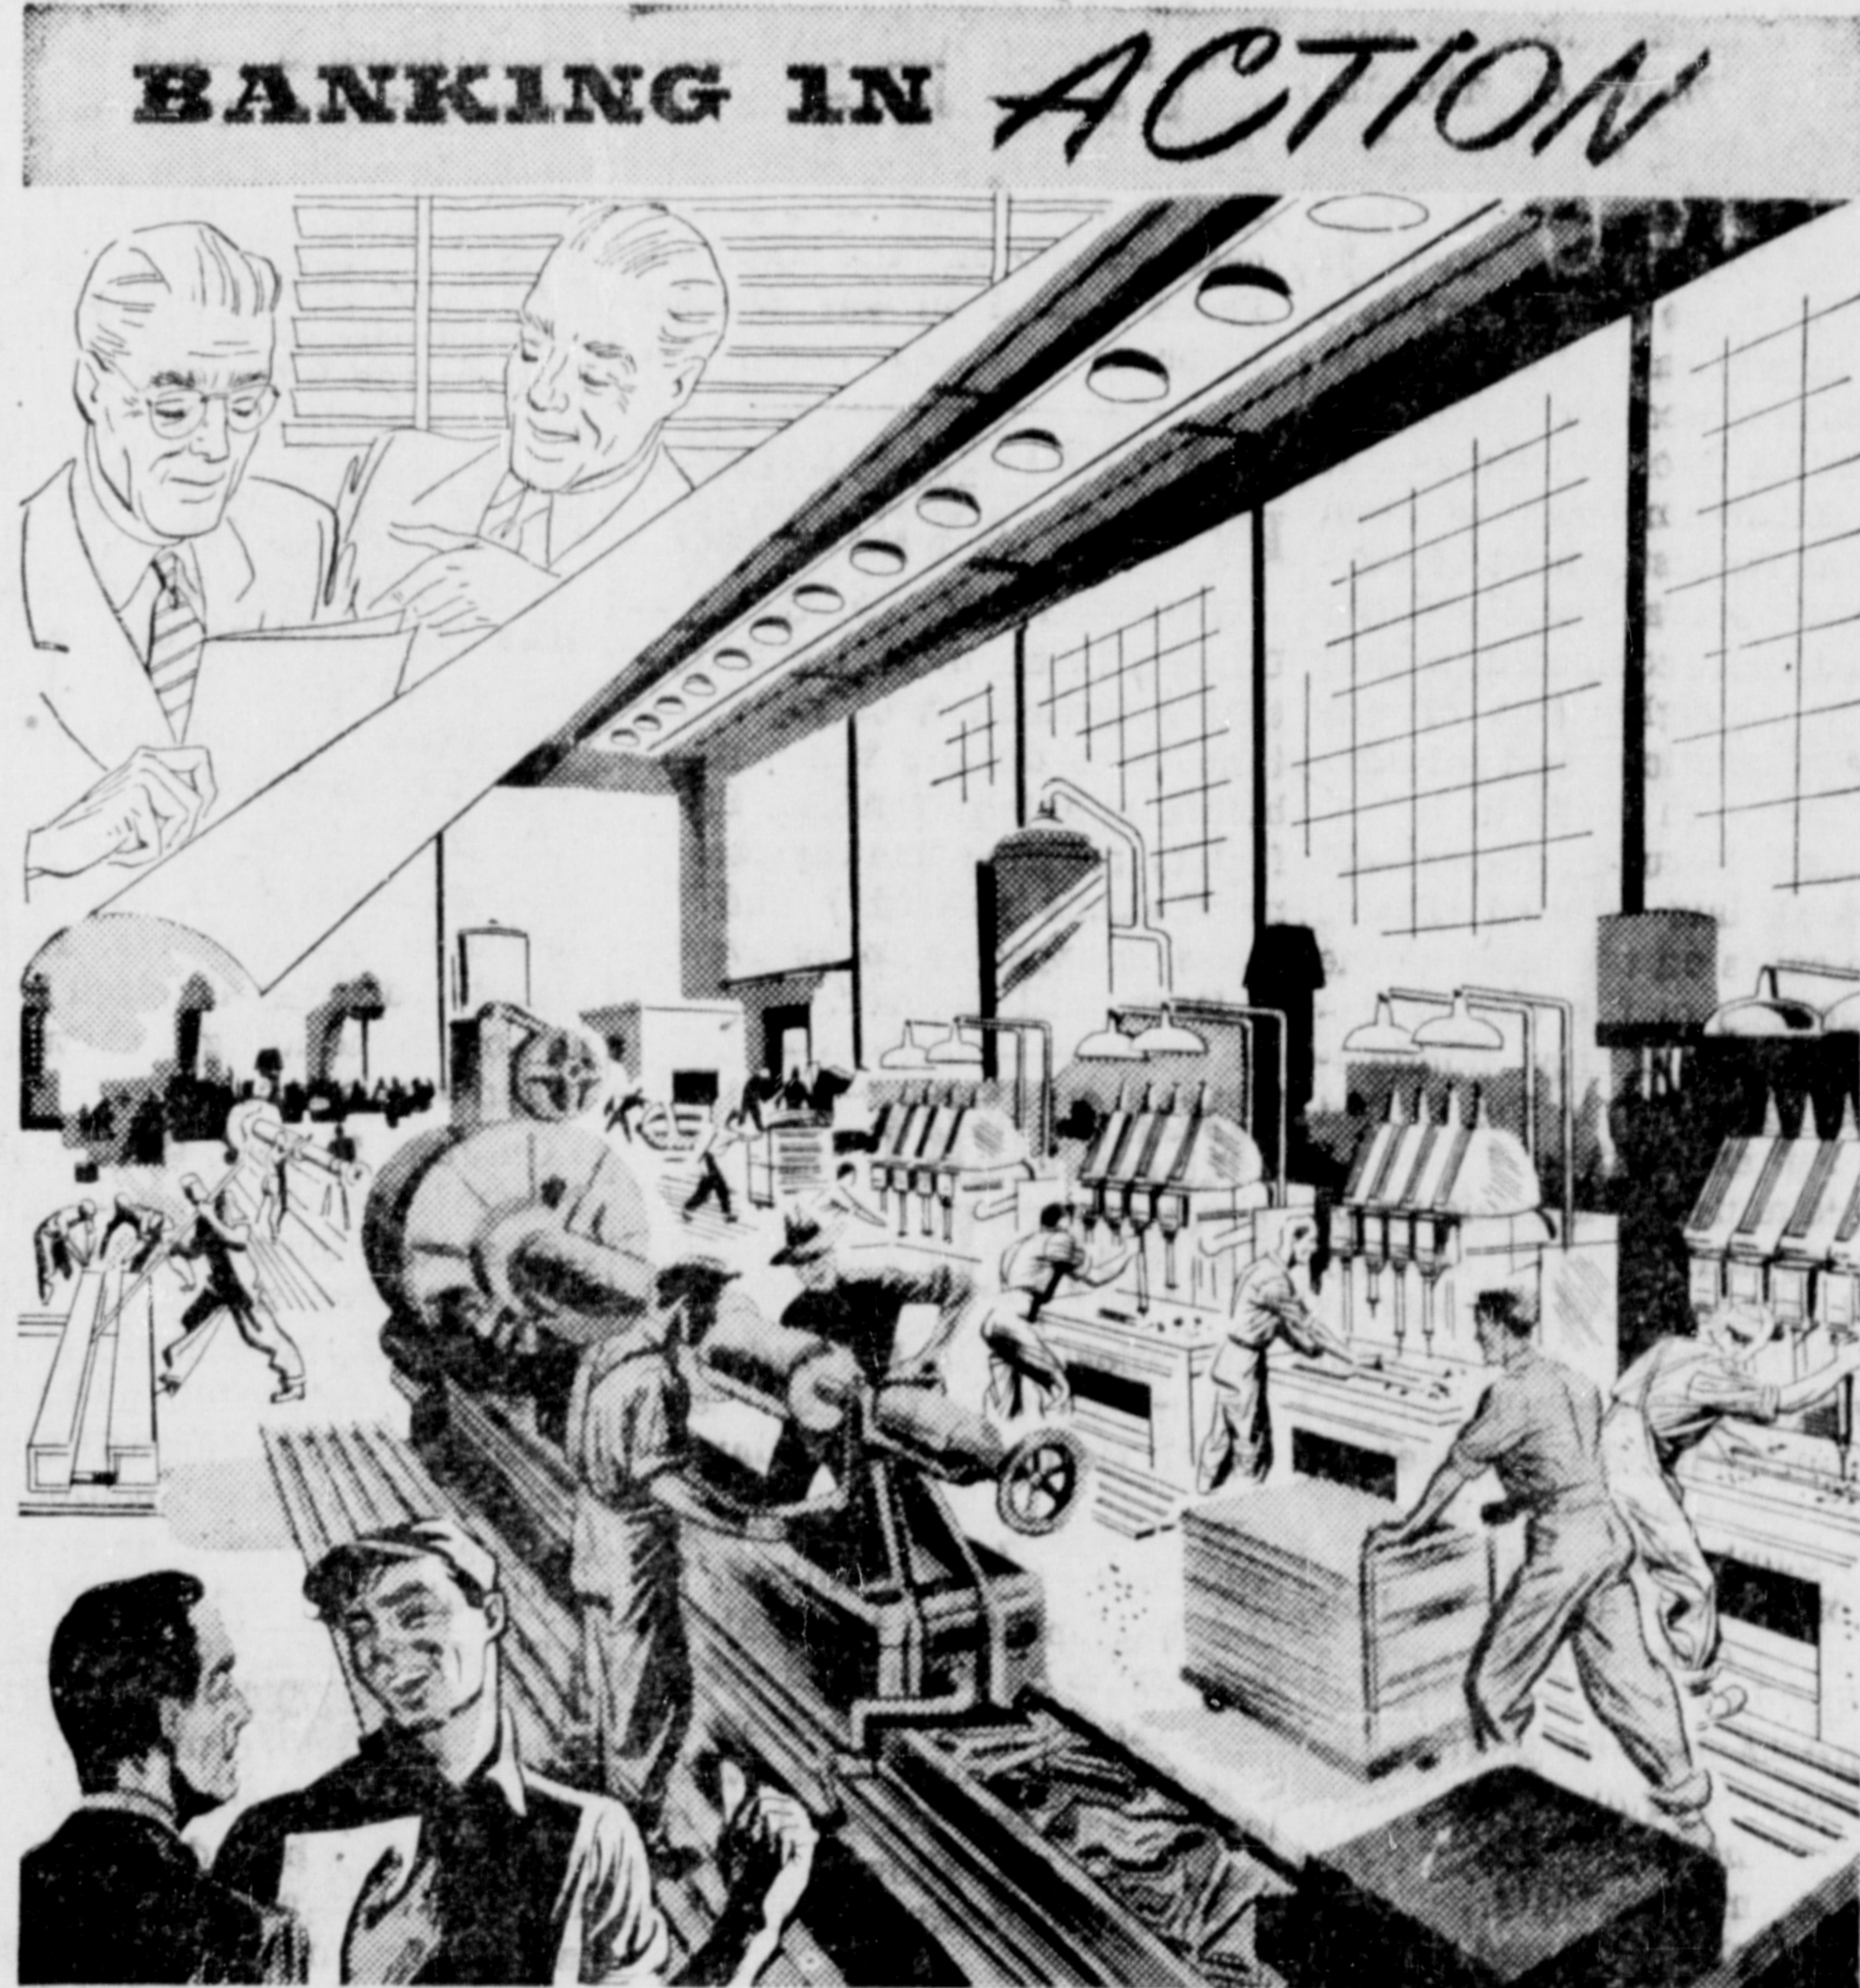

Business in connection with forthcoming conventions occupied considerable of the time of the Junior Section of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce at its regular monthly dinner meeting last night. One of these conventions is the regional conference of Junior Chambers of Commerce, currently in session at Prince George with Alf Rivett as delegate, which it was decided to invite to meet next year in Prince Rupert. While some exception was taken to the fact that the Junior Chamber had not been assigned an official delegate at the annual convention of the Association Boards of Trade of Central British Columbia to be held in Terrace August 2 and 3, it was decided to be represented on a preliminary resolutions committee by Earl Gordon. Another convention in which the local Junior Chamber is to take a particularly active part is the annual convention of Commerce of Canada where President C. G. Ham will be the delegate and at which a special fish dinner of salmon and halibut is to be put on by the local Junior Chamber with the co-operation of the Prince Rupert Public Relations Council.

Tony Crawley reported on preparations for the Port Day celebration to be staged the latter part of July in connection with the annual Civic Centre Carnival. Mr. Crawley reported gratifying support in connection with this event from the public as a whole.

Regular meetings of the Junior Chamber are to be suspended during the months of July and August.

The victory of freedom over despotism was a long, drawn-out fight, for even with the demise of Charles I of England in 1689, the press was still suppressed through licensing.
