Among other dresses designed by Hartnell is a dinner gown in stiff sapphire velvet. The slightly draped bust is set on a diamond shaped front waist, pulled into a separate belt at the back. The sleeves are long and fitted and the skirt flairs out from the hips by virtue of the stiffness of the velvet.

Lady Alexander has an evening gown of heavy brocade reminiscent of a century ago with a small floral design of cherry color on a shot cherry and white background. The skirt is fitted to the knees, then becomes full to the ground and is about a foot longer at the back than

HOPING FOR MUNICIPAL RELIEF-REVIVING INTEREST IN TENNIS

The Village Commissioners and the Clerk attended the hearing in Prince Rupert Wednesday last of the provincial-municipal relations commission and presented their brief. The dress is plainly tailored with slightly flaired, panelled skirt. The jacket buttons up to the two small revers and has a box pleat on each pocket.

Another ensemble is a royal blue dress and jacket with midnight blue overcoat. Here again the dress is on simple tailored lines and the jacket is collarless with two small epaulets on each other day. Start now to relieve shoulder. The revers are buttoned back and the buttons are T-22 strung on with the material instead of being sewn on. The midnight blue coat has plaster lion buttons and large revers from the neckline going over each shouldler to form epaulets and continuing down the back to the waist to form a V.

Delanghe has also designed a printed dinner dress in cornflower blue on a white ground. The skirt is slim fitting with a draped band twined round from the hips to the bottom of the skirt. It has a simple V-shaped neck with loose fitting sleeves on the magyar line.

Another evening dress is in midnight blue slipper satin with loose tiers of lace at the back forming a bustle and inserted at the back of the bodice and up over the shoulders to form soft cape sleeves. The neckline is very low in front with a rolled lip edge.

Lady Alexander also has a black lace dinner gown with softly draped bodice and skirt with two pink water-lilies attached below the square neck-

The ration budget of a twosome will allow a steak for Sunday eating. On Monday, veal ragout will provide a meaty meal. On Tuesday you can have recourse to fish fillets done to your liking. One pound of sausage will take care of Wednesday's dinner, as well as an accompaniment to Thursday's lamb chops or a breakfast special. Curried eggs can hold the spotlight on Friday. Saturday's meat loaf allows for guests, or cold cuts for Sunday supper.

The month of May ushers in the canning season. for which each ration book holder is allotted ten pounds of sugar — the same amount as last year. There are no specific coupons set aside for this purposè, but ten extra sugar-preserves coupons, each good for one pound of sugar or for other items on the sugar-preserves ration if you do not put up your own fruit, will be validated. The first five of these, S8, S9, S10, S11 and S12 become valid on May 2nd, the rest on July 4th.

It is not necessary to use these immediately if the fruit you plan to preserve is not in season. If however you do buy sugar now for later use, it would be wise to label it "canning" and set it aside for such. The important point to remember is that just ten coupons will be granted for the season, and it is up to you to plan their wise and efficient use so that you can highlight next winter's meals, whether you do your own canning or purchase preserves items at the store.

In addition to the canning sugar, two regular augar-preserves coupons become valid, S13 and S14 on May 16th. The purchase pattern outlined above suggests how a twosome might use them to provide a modest amount of sugar, some truit, and the seasonable maple syrup (its coupon value reverts to 48 fluid ounces May 31st.)
