SHORT SPORT

Resumption of the Wightman Cup series and Wimbledon tennis tournament this summer in Britain after a seven-year lapse has demonstrated all too clearly Britain's lack of players ready for international competition. British players weren't even within hailing distance of victory so the council of the Lawn Tennis Association has decided to launch a nation-wide coaching scheme early in 1947, to develop new talent. It hopes to obtain co-operation of local education authorities on an expense-sharing basis. The plan is to divide the country into five areas, and all secondary and elementary schools where tennis is taught will be invited to participate. School teachers, supervised by professional coaches, will be asked to look out for promising youngsters. Boys and girls who show ability will be taken in hand by county branches of the L.T.A. and given advanced teaching. "It is the finest thing that has happened in British lawn tennis for many years," a member of the L.T.A. executive said.

HOOP TALK

Word has finally been received by the Prince Rupert Basketball Association that the University of British Columbia Chiefs, who were to play here during Christmas week now find it impossible to include Prince Rupert in their list of engagements for the coming winter. They found, after closer checking that the distance between Rupert and Vancouver was much to far for the boys to travel. This word was received yesterday and today the wires were hot with the Association trying to find some other suitable opponents for the local All-Stars during the holidays.

New Metlakatla will play here December 17 and 18 and will bring along with them a squad of pre-war stars such as has not shown here since Pearl Harbor. In an exhibition game at home last week the Metlakatla boys took the measure of the Ketchikan team that gave the local boys a rough time a few days ago at the Civic Centre. As a matter of fact, they rode all over Ketchikan to the tune of 51 to 39.

Much has been heard around the cigar stores of the show put on by Jack Lindsay and Ted Arney Tuesday night. What effect an affair such as this might have on league attendance is a question. There is little complaint from the fans as far as the bout went and it seems that many would sooner have seen the boys go at it. But Jim Nicoll might have a spot for these two chaps on his forthcoming fight card at the Civic Centre.

From Art Murray comes word that, before the gym closed for the evening Tuesday, Arney had admitted to George Howe, 99 manager, that he was a little out of line and that, even though Lindsay may have shoved a little at times on the floor, he felt that he should have refrained from any antogonistic chatter. Fortunately, no one was any the worse after the smoke cleared and that's the way things should end. After all there are rows in the highest categories of sport that would make the local rumpus look like a pillow fight.

Everyone is awaiting the meeting between the Bo-Me-Hi boys and the 99 Seniors which should take place next Tuesday. Both teams are undefeated so far and, as Art Murray has been held partly responsible for the forcing of the students into the senior league, he may have to take the consequence. The students took the Savoy team with ease a week or so ago and 99 found the Savoys nothing but trouble last Tuesday, there being only two points difference when the game ended. It looks like the game of the year alright. Hardly what could be called a grudge game but when two undefeated teams meet in any league it usually means action.

* * *

There is nothing but gloom in the 99 camp these days as Angus MacPhee keeps repeating that he must stop playing shortly if his ailing back doesn't take a turn for the better and that gloom is certainly warranted. Word also comes from Neil Ross that he is not at all pleased with his having to release Alex Bill to coach the High School in the senior league as senior material is scarce as those teeth they speak of in poultry circles.

At last it's happened—horse and rider in a steeplechase have finished their adventure together—perched atop a fence, rocking horse fashion. Well-backed to win the Grand Sefton 'chase at Liverpool, Ian Alder wast last seen as he approached the open ditch after passing the stands the first time. His effort at a leap landed him with his forelegs over the fence and hind legs in the rear. His jockey kept his seat as the horse fell astride the obstacle. The pair remained in that position a moment; then the rider climbed off and walked along the top of the fence while park attendants dragged the animal to firm ground.

All is not well on the professional snooker front. Alex Brown, who began pro sport as a motorcycle speedway rider, and turned to the cue game, is sore at the way things are developing since Joe Davis announced his retirement a couple of months ago. Alex, rated by some experts a few years ago as the world's No. 2 snooker player, isn't included in a four-player round-robin tournament to decide a successor for Davis and has thrown out a $400 challenge to the winner. The four in the tournament are Horace Lindrum, Duncan Macdonald, Jack Smith and Fred Davis, Joe's brother.
