FIRST THINGS FIRST

EXPLANATIONS, valid though Lithey may be, as to why nothing can be done to effectively improve Prince Rupert's disgraceful street conditions will not satisfy the citizens who, reasonably or unreasonably, are wanting action. It is a very difficult situation, having so many poor streets and sewers too, as the city engineer reminds us, and so little money to spend upon them. We wish we could propound some better solution than to suggest that the best possible use be made of the limited resources at our command, pending relief coming from some quarter such as the federal government with whom the city is, no doubt, continuing to press its case to the utmost.

One thing the city authorities, of course, must do when their resources are so limited is to put first things first. If streets and sewers are the worst needs of the city, then streets and sewers should have the first call on the money with other expeditures curtailed to the minimum or lopped off altogether if not of vital need or primary importance

There might also be such a thing as far as the streets themselves are concerned as endeavouring to spread out over too much ground and getting nothing very effective accomplished. No doubt, the public works department is taking that into consideration. A little good work would provide some satisfaction whereas a lot of ineffective patchwork only develops more criticism and unhappiwho pay the taxes and live here the year around who, after all, should have the first call on the financial resources of the city which they provide, in season and out. Roads and sewers are vital to their health and well-being, to say nothing of their comfort and contentment.

In denying various requests, it has been impressed upon us by the civic authorities time and again that there is only so much money to spend. They are the judges of what we shall have or not have. To choose wisely is their responsibility and it may not be so easy always to do so.

On the face of things, it looks now like we should be conserving everything for our streets and sewers even if it means a period of austerity in doing so. Every dollar, it appears essential, should be made to count against the primary objec-

HIGHWAY DANGERS

MOTORISTS on the Prince Rupert Highway complain of the renewed practice of throwing and breaking bottles along the road. The tires of more than one car have come to grief while enroute as a result, it is said. Unfortunately, there are some people who ride along the road, so popular these fine summer days, who are so disregarding of others that they will indulge in such thoughtless practice.

There is also talk of considerable carelessness in cars driving along the highway. If such is the case, there will, doubtless, be a serious accident in due time - an accident that will bring death, injury, sorrow and remorse. Unfortunately, there are always those among us who cannot take care of themselves and become a menace to others. It is because of such people that there are highway patrols. The time, it seems, has about come when such a patrol will be required along the Prince Rupert Highway which, like all highways, has its features that require all motorists using it to be in full possession and control of their facul-
