Mrs. (Colonel) Layman, in reply, expressed their pleasure in having the opportunity to visit northern British Columbia.

Colonel Layman brought greetings from Commissione Orames assuring the delegates of the Salvation Army's interest in the welfare of the native people.

The final address of the evening was given by the colonel. He outlined the traditions and customs of the past which have fostered the development of a strong Canadian character. Prominent among these influences were the reverence and respect for law, the Sabbath and the purposes of Christianity. "It is not the Church but ourselves if we neglect these essentials,' concluded Colenel Layman.
