A SERIOUS MATTER

IN WASTAGE of valuable and much needed food product the incipient strike of fish handlers at Prince Rupert has already made itself felt through fish having had to be dumped because the fish handlers refused to touch it Saturday afternoon and Sunday. Next Monday, unless there is a settlement of points in dispute and a calling off of the strike in the meantime, the full force of the strike will be felt at Prince Rupert not only in wastage of food but in widespread loss of work and a crippling generally of the community's most important industry. All of which emphasizes; the serious responsibility of those who permit such a tie-up to eventualize.

A strike in the fish handling industry would constitute the most widespread industrial tie-up Prince Rupert has ever had. It would affect every business and activity of the city. It is very important that all those concerned with the dispute should exhaust every reasonable effort to reach ground so that such a tie-up would be averted.

When you mix genius with a little sweat you've got about as good a recipe for success as there is.

AIR TRAVEL TAKES

A NOVEL CEREMONY at the Seal A Cove air base yesterday afternoon when the christening took place of the Skeena Queen, second of the air liners to be placed in service between Prince Rupert and Vancouver, served to accentuate the fact that the pioneering of Queen Charlotte Airlines in commercial aviation from here has, in its so far brief ·span, done much to make Prince Rupert and its people air-conscious. We have long looked for the day when such a regular service would be available here. Now it is an accomplished fact. All that is needed now is a reduction of the rate tariff to a more reasonable figure to make air travel between Prince Rupert and Vancouver as well as other points on the coast an accepted thing which will demand a much more frequent service than the two regular flights a week which have now been instituted.

HIGH SCHOOL DOES WELL

CONGRATULATIONS are due staff and pupils of Booth Memorial High School on what appears to have been a very creditable record of achievement in the matriculation examinations, results of which we published at the end of the week. There were 23 candidates and of those it is already known that fourteen were successful in passing clear in all subjects. No doubt, when the detailed results are transmitted here, it will be found that of the remaining candidates several have obtained substantial partial standing and, with the writing off of a supplemental or two before fall, will have qualified to proceed with academic studies either here, if the Senior Matriculation course is instituted, or in the south at university or High School. Prince Rupert High School has made a gratifying come-back and it is a matter of satisfaction for all concerned.

HOME-MAKING VITAL

HOMEMAKERS are in a peculiar I position. They contribute so much to the family, community and state, yet are classed roughly as non-workers because they appear in a column of statistics headed "not in gainful occupations." One homemaker has kept a scientific record for 15 years. She has proved to her own satisfaction that the average woman who prepares meals, cans, preserves, produces substantially the equal value of the man's economic contribution in industry. Men who think back over the past six years will realize the wonderful job their womenfolk have done in spreading thin and making ends meet.

ALCOHOLICS REGENERATED

Members of Alcoholics Anonymous Help Themselves and Others

By JACK RUTLEDGE

DALLAS (AP) - Two hundred veterans of the struggle against alcoholism leaned forward tensely. The auditorium was quiet as the weekly meeting of the Alcoholics Anonymous was called to order.

"Folks," said the speaker in a husky voice, "tonight we're celebrating two birthdays. Bill is two years old, and Mary is

The crowd broke into cheers. Bill and Mary stood up, beaming proudly. Bill hadn't taken a drink for two years, Mary for

"We'll hear from Judge Joe Hill, who handles drunks by the hundreds, later on," the speaker said. "But first we'll let Bill and Mary say a few words. Now, you don't have to give your last names unless you want to," he

The man spoke first. He was frank and unashamed. He gave his name and occupation. He told of the lives he'd wrecked, of the happiness he'd blasted, of the physical damage h drinking has caused.

"Preachers preached about me, my mother prayed, and my wife cried," he said. "I jhst couldn't stop drinking. I know now that it's a disease, just like diabetes. Alcoholics Anonymous cured me.

"It's the most exclusive club in the world. Only reformed beauty, its superb weather and drunkards, can join. It doesn't so many attractions should cost a cent to belong, but it costs a fortune to get in. 1 figure it cost me at least $50,000 -money I've lost because of my drinking."

Then Mary spoke. She was a beauty parlor operator. She had lost most of her customers because, they just didn't like to have a drunken operator mauling over them. But now-

"I don't say I'm cured for keeps, I saw an alkie boast that he was on the wagon for life, that he'd never touch another drop. The next night he was drunk and in jail. I know that I'm just one drink away from being a drunkard. All I can say is that I'm sober tonight, that I have been for a year, and if I be shipped away, say to Vanjust stay sober a day at a time, and let each day take care of itself, I'll be okay."

"I used to think drunks were fhnny," Judge Hill said with a grin. "When I first sat on the bench, I handled a hundred or so drunks a day. After a while I began to learn things about drunkards—and alcoholics. There was the character who appeared time and time before me, and I finally lost patience and told him he just didn't have any will

"This fellow told me with a 2. What is the correct prosort of pitying look that I didn't know what will power was. He said he had become so desperate for a drink that he got a pair of pliers and pulled the gold fillings from his teeth to trade for money, and drink.

"Judge, could you do that? You got that much will power?' The judge went on to say that of all the people he knew, he liked alcoholics best. They are the most honest men in the spe-shez (both e's as in me, acworld, he said. While most people try to alibi for mistakes, an Alcoholic Anonymous member who car before you make has taken the pledge has, first of all, "got right" with himself and admitted he was an alcoholic and could not handle his

"It certainly seems a pity to us that a town like Prince Rupert, with its great possibilities. its wonderful setting, its natural inactive and run-down, agreed J. H. Gammon and E. H.
