"They Never Failed" is Story of Courageous British Newspaperman During War

By JOHN DAPHINE-
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, (C)—Newspaper offices were destroyed or damaged, staffs were cut beyond the danger point and newsprint supplies were only 20 per cent of pre-war quantities—but Britain's provincial press always came out on time.

"They Never Failed" is their story—an 80-page booklet written by Leonard Fletcher, public relations officer of the Newspaper Society. It is a record of achievement, persistence, difficulties overcome, and initiative. Papers were printed within a few feet of unexploded bombs, under official orders to run the presses slowly to reduce vibration. Offices were wrecked and papers printed in other towns without the readers being told, because of wartime censorship.

These are some examples of war problems and how they were met:

The Exeter Express and Echo, bombed out, published 29 months from an emergency plant in the covered tennis court at the Earl of Devon's seat at Powderham Park, seven miles away.

All four Welsh dailies were produced under one roof when the Western Mail, South Wales Echo and South Wales Evening Post, all out of action through bombing, moved into the Newport plant of the South Wales Evening Argus.

The Coventry Evening Telegraph, smashed in 1941, put its staff to work in nine different offices in four different towns and still is being printed at Nuncaton. The Western Independent moved from Plymouth, badly wounded naval base, to Ivybridge where its power came from an old water-wheel generator and some of its lighting from oil lamps.

Bristol Papers Were Hard Hit

Demonstrate Jeep To Tough Customer

JOHANNESBURG, (C)—Secure in the approval of most of the world's military authorities, the jeep will be tried on a more finicky type of customer shortly. The national parks board has bought three jeeps for experimental purposes prior to the re-opening of Kruger National Park. If the wild animals in the park don't mind having them around, jeeps will be permitted in the game preserve, which was closed to the public during the war years.

Switzerland Builds Children's Village

TROGEN, Switzerland, (C)—Foundations of a village to shelter 350 orphans from various devastated European countries were laid recently on an 11 acre tract near Trogen, in the mountainous eastern part of Switzerland.

The first 15 dwellings will be built in Swiss farm style, surrounded by orchards and pastures. Three to five houses will be grouped to form a community where the children will be instructed by Swiss and foreign teachers.

The children's village was named Pestalozzi, after the famous Swiss educator who died in 1827.

gas and electricity supplies wiped out by air raiders, turned out 20,000 copies of a one-sheet foolscap edition on duplicating machines. The Bristol Daily Press published an emergency one-sheet edition during the height of an enemy attack, the type handset by lamplight in an air raid shelter. The Newcastle Journal and North Mail was printed in old pithead buildings at a Heddon mine, eight miles up the Tyne.

The Luton News, publishing a series of local weeklies, printed up to 1,000,000 copies daily of Nachrichten fur der Truppe—"News for the Troops"—the first daily airborne newspaper in the world which was dropped over German lines in Normandy and is credited with many surrenders in the Cherbourg area.

Sailors in "bell bottoms" manned linotype machines in the Portsmouth Evening News plant, setting type for confidential D-Day documents.

The Newspaper Society, founded in 1836, has a membership of more than 100 daily and 1,000 weekly provincial and London suburban newspapers.

"Those newspapers enjoy a prestige higher than at any other time in their history," writes Sir William Bailey, the Society's wartime president, in an introduction to Mr. Fletcher's booklet.

"The provincial press will be equal to the opportunities and responsibilities of the peace."

WRENNETS IN BOAT PULLING

Sea Cadets Tag Day Was Success—New Equipment

Owing to the holiday and the fact that some had gone camping there was not quite as big a turnout as usual at the weekly parade of the Captain Cook Corps of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets last evening but the Wrennettes were out in strength and had their first cutter pulling practice. With Lieutenant Commander A. S. Mitchell in charge the girls soon got into the swing and they stroked together well. They did so well that it did not seem possible that it was their first time out.

The results of the Cadet tag day show that the gratifying total of $429.75 was collected. This was taken as a tribute to the good work done by the taggers and an appreciation of the work being done by the Sea Cadet organization. Incidentally this is the fiftieth anniversary of the Navy League in Canada.

Keen competition between the cadets as to which should get the most was shown with Billy Sunberg and Eric Moore collecting over $60 each, only a few cents being between them. They were on the job early and stayed with it. Others were S. Hemmons, V. Tattersall, J. Hemmons, R. Wood, D. Large, Ethel Hemmons, Bruce Mills, F. Eady, J. Hebb, T. Holt, D. Leighton, C. Haugan, M. Sedgwick, H. Weiss, M. Shenton, R. Davies, R. Weiss, A. MacFarlane, E. Toderas, E. Mostad, B. MacFarlane, W. Stacey, R. Overgaard, A. Kimball and H. Mostad.

FISHERMEN LAND AN ANCIENT TURTLE TODAY

SYDNEY, Australia, (C)—At nearby Palm Beach last month fishermen landed a half-ton turtle, estimated to be 200 years old. The turtle, believed to be the biggest landed so far south of the tropics, was caught in the net of two professional fishermen. Their mechanical gear was not equal to the strain of hauling the turtle aboard, and they had to trail it six miles and obtain the help of four other men before they could get it into their boat.

The meat was cut off and sent to the Sydney Fish Market, where it proved popular with the public. Local residents who cut off samples for both soup and steak said it was delicious. The fishermen who caught it spent nearly a day cleaning the barnacles from the shell to make it into a dinghy, and one of them plans to take his young son for a trip out to sea in the improvised craft.

So badly did the British newspaper supply dwindle during the war that for a period of seven months in 1943 British provincial daily newspapers were allowed only 26.7 per cent of their pre-war supply, and even by the end of 1945 the allotment had been raised to only 35.3 per cent.

advanced training will be given. Within the next few weeks the ranking for the various competitions will be decided upon so that the results will be available for the annual presentation of prizes. The strength of the corps is being maintained with four new members joining the "leader" division.
