

Fork-Tailed Drongo Likes Hard Liquor

PORT SHEPSTONE, South Africa — A fork-tailed drongo (or king crow) here shows a marked preference for hard liquor and can easily drink his purchase price in brandy—for he cost his present owner only threepence. Mrs. A. C. Worthington says her bird "Blackie" prefers adult company at all times and likes a glass of "something hard" between times. His eyes glitter greedily as he hops along the table to perch on the rim of a glass of brandy and water, which he sips with relish. "Blackie" refuses to be fooled and never touches plain water in a glass. He cannot speak but loves to irritate other birds and people by mimicking them, and manages to "shout" at a dog friend in an almost human tone.

The retarding influence of a dictatorial press has been demonstrated in Japan by the ignorance of general knowledge on the part of newspaper reporters.

Makes Tough Trip But Gets No Votes

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — Electioneering in New Zealand involves the conscientious candidate in some unconventional travelling. To enlist the support of 30 voters, mostly elderly retired people living on Pine Island, in the upper reaches of Auckland Harbor, A. M. Laing, National party candidate for Waitakere, borrowed a flat-bottomed rowboat to row across from the mainland. Taking off his coat, shoes and socks, he pulled the boat out across the mud, poled it clear of the mangroves and rowed against a strong wind and ebb tide to the island. Outside the island's one store he held a meeting of electors seated on the communal bench which is the main gathering place for the residents. He was subjected to a constant fire of questions and interjections throughout his speech. As he hurried off to make the return trip while the tide made it still possible, the meeting carried a vote of confidence in the Labor party, his political opponents.

SHORT SPORT

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, whose word was law in baseball for 25 years, died in Chicago after a two-month illness two years ago yesterday. The 78-year-old baseball commissioner was appointed following the Chicago "Black Sox" scandal to restore confidence in the game. Senator A. B. (Happy) Chandler succeeded him as commissioner.

The National Hockey League career of Tony Demers, hard-hitting Montreal Canadiens right-winger, was cut short four years ago today when he suffered a double fracture of the right leg in an automobile accident at Valleyfield, Que.

BANNED FROM INTERMEDIATES

Forman, Hartwig, Ciccone, Thompson and Lavigne Line Dubbed Too Good

After a heated debate during a special executive meeting of the Prince Rupert Basketball Association last evening it was finally decided that the first string of Forman, Hartwig, Ciccone, Thompson and Lavigne of the strong Bo-Me-Hi team be banned from playing in the Intermediate section of the city league and that they be given the option of playing on separate teams of their own choice in the senior loop or forming their own squad to play for the senior championship. Their place in the Intermediate League will be filled by a native entry from Port Edward which will play tonight for the first time against Macey's.

Coach Alex Bill, who put forth a great defence for his team, claimed he had hoped to win the intermediate cup this year and felt he should have had a chance to play off with the winners of the intermediate league at the end of the season. It was the opinion of the meeting, however, that the student squad no longer served to the advantage of the league in their present capacity, and since they have already handed one senior team a one-sided lacing, they were asking for too much advantage by continuing to play in their present category.

So now, it looks as though the whole senior and intermediate standings go by the board and that a new schedule will have to be drawn up immediately to take care of the situation.

A report of the Ketchikan series showed the gate receipts to be as expected and a financial success was assured when the report is made final.
