Principal officers for the coming year were elected as follows at last night's monthly meeting of the local Bethel of Job's Daughters:

Honored Queen, Bernice Eastwood.

Senior Princess, Solveig Mork.
Junior Princess, Marjorie Eby.

LIFE in this Prince Rupert
by BIDDEE JINKS

The time when all hook-nosed witches looked over their stock of brooms, hob-goblins donned their sootiest suits, and children carved triangular-nosed faces in unsuspecting pumpkins, has come and gone for another year.

To most of us, it meant an evening of constant running to and from the door in answer to an anthem of "Hallowe'en Apples—Trick or Treat!"—and the following morning scooping garbage back into an overturned tin. Reminiscing on less modern days, we still may be thankful there are no small four-walled out-buildings to be turned "draughty-bottoms up!"

Twice, a decade and a half apart (fathers will brag to their sons!) a more energetic group went to work on King Edward School, raising a huge skull and cross-bones banner to the top of the flagpole, which at that time stood on the turret of the building. As a final touch, the pole was adequately greased, and the cord cut; hence the flag, of necessity, continued to flutter to the delight of the "saints" who had accomplished the feat.

Strangely enough, Hallowe'en and Saints are definitely related. The Hallowe'en of today is a far cry from the original established by the early Christian Fathers in commemoration of saints and martyrs, and held on November 1 as a great feast day. The eve, therefore, on October 31 was called All Hallow's E'en, the name derived from the old English word "halwe," or holy.

Prior to this time, the Romans held this feast in honor of Pomona, goddess of fruit trees. In Britain, the Druids celebrated a festival at the same time in honor of the sun god and in thanksgiving for harvest. When the people became Christian, their leaders wisely allowed them
