Safety Council Provides Tips on Avoiding Infant Accidents

By EDWARD S. KITCH CHICAGO, ()-Fatal accidents among infants are common—and common sense can prevent them. Mrs. Anne H. Barnard, director of the Women's Division of the National Safety Council, knows them. Here is her advice to young tot alone for too long.

mothers. of the deaths of children under five last year—the lowest rate on record for this age group. Mrs. Barnard says most child deaths were caused by burns and suffocation. Poisoning, drowning and falling contributed to the total of 7.912 child fatalities occurring in 1944.

She says even the safety pin is unsafe because of the dangers of pricking a child or of its being swallowed. A mother so often sets a poor example by holding safety pins in her mouth while changing a diaper.

Safety pins should be stuck into the mattress or cake of soap. bious. When not in use the pins should be closed and put out of reach of busy little hands.

Discussing the question "What

'HONESTY BOXES' School?" Mr. Clark expressed the LONDON, (P) - The London opinion that the High School should not be expected to be the main factor in moral development which he felt was the responsibility of the home and church. It should not be expected to produce fully educated people but should whet the desire for more learning, develop a tolerable point of view, produce the background for a wellrounded citizen and establish the basis for social living. The school should not endeavour to take the job of home, church, industry or political clubs. He suggested that the school might be falling short of its objectives now because it was aiming too high.
