KIDS THRONG WINNIPEG'S PLAY TOWNS

Youngsters Take Kindly to Scheme Teaching Primary Lessons in Citizenship

WINNIPEG, (CP)—Quiet, sandy-haired Ed Weiss is a mayor at the age of 15. True, his civic domain is only the Aberdeen School ground in North Winnipeg, but he has a municipal council and all the other things that go with being a chief magistrate. As he walks among his youthful constituents, they greet him respectfully with, "Hello, Mr. Mayor."

Ed and six others like him are key figures in a new scheme to teach Winnipeg youngsters the meaning of self-government. Under the direction of Charles Barbour, city recreation chief and former Montreal physical instructor, seven of Winnipeg's 39 playgrounds have been designated as "playtowns."

Each playtown has at least one director, usually a high school or university student, but much of the organization work is left to the elected representatives of the children themselves.

Ed and his four counsellors, two girls and two boys, keep tab on a comprehensive program designed to educate the children as well as amuse them. Councillor Tommy Bryant, 10, looks after safety squads and clean-up gangs. His 14-year old brother Ronnie, who can rattle off the names of most of the big league baseball stars, is in charge of a sports program that includes everything from boxing to croquet and whist.

The council also supervises craft and hobby activities, while a hard-working drama group is preparing a production of "Snow White and Rose Red."

Fights Are Out

Ed likes his job. "It's good training," he says. "The kids are fun to work with. Sure, they rib me a bit, but they're always friendly and eager to co-operate. We haven't had a single fight yet."

But despite the success of the Aberdeen government, there's still plenty of work for the two directors, Norma Rodin and Sam Kantorovich, both university students.

"Our biggest problem was to get the children to come to the playground," says Sam. "The best method was to stop youngsters on the street and ask them if they'd like to get into a ball game."

Bats and balls are scare in Winnipeg's poorer districts, and the invitation usually produced results.

There's lots of work, too, for Mr. Barbour. He does his office work in the mornings and spends the afternoons distributing athletic equipment, conferring with his mayors and directors and ironing out a host of petty difficulties.

Although sports are the big drawing card for all seven playtowns, Mr. Barbour emphasizes that he's not interested in developing star athletes. "This is a program of mass recreation, and our object is to cultivate sportsmanship, citizenship, and a sense of cultural values."

PLAYGROUNDS IN BOMB RUINS

LONDON (CP) — Some of London's grim scars of war—areas where German bombs turned whole rows of houses into a mass of tangled debris — have been cleared and transformed into open-air playgrounds where small children, especially in crowded districts, play safely and happily under the supervision of trained mothercraft nurses.

Mothers working a 30-hour week leave their youngsters at a charge of 20 cents a day. The children play from early morning until sunset to their heart's content with swings, see-saws, rocking horses and rag dolls — still not easy to get in post-war Britain. The daily three meals consist of breakfast (which includes free orange juice), a cooked dinner and tea.

20 YEARS AGO

August 8, 1926

Prime Minister Arthur Meighen was expected to arrive in the city within a few days, having changed his timing on a western pre-election tour. Local Conservatives looked forward with interest to hearing his speech.

Vic Foley, Canadian lightweight boxing champion, had accepted an offer to fight Jack Newman in a championship bout during the Northern Agricultural Association exhibition on September 15.

Canadian government freighter, Canadian Prospector came off the pontoons at the dry dock and sailed for Victoria and Union Bay to load cargo and fuel for Europeon points. She underwent hull repairs and painting.

ent that there is a shortage of consumer goods in most places.

"At all places visited, Mr. Vaughan had the opportunity of making an inspection of company facilities and discussing matters with officers and employees. "Our railway facilities are in good condition considering the tremendous amount of traffic we handled during the war years. Every one of our employees gave outstanding service during those exacting times and after meeting so many of them I feel they are all ready to continue their efficient service to the public."

Mr. Vaughan visited both company summer resorts in the west, Minaki and Jasper Park Lodge and said they were operating practically to capacity. "Each is handling the largest number of guests since their inception."

Saw Shipyards

"At the Pacific Coast I had the opportunity of visiting some of the shipyards and discussing the construction of a new passenger steamship for our company. This will be placed in the Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Alaska service. No contract has yet been let but the new ship will be a very outstanding contribution to passenger and shipping circles on the West Coast."

In commenting on the present day railway earnings, Mr. Vaughan stated that all railways on the continent are finding themselves in an increasingly difficult position owing to the decline in gross earnings and at the same time a great increase in the cost of wages and materials.

"We are well organized to handle the present grain crop and will use every car to the best advantage in moving the grain from the prairies," declared Mr. Vaughan.
