The Ottawa Conference

With his promise that the personal income tax will be lowered and the corporate double income tax will be ameliorated so as to make it. worthwhile for the ordinary small busines is to carry on expanding, improving and providing employment which they have been limited in doing during recent years, Prime Minister Mackenzie King makes it hard for the provinces not to at least sympathetically consider adopting, if not accepting, the federal proposals.

Some sound effective way must eventually be devised by Ottawa to meet its huge financial obligations which are not ended just because the war is over. At the same time, the provinces have work to do and functions to carry out and they must have adequate means of financing

The problem which faces the conference is reaching some sort of a division of the fields of public revenue-raising that will provide the revenue needed by the Dominion and the provinces. At the same time, the system of taxation cannot be permitted to reach a point either on personal or business incomes where initiative and incentive is squelched such as is very nearly the case these days as a result of the double corporate income and excess profits

It is not an easy task to reconcile the needs of the Dominion on the one hand and those of the provinces on the other. While the governments try to make both ends meet, the public clamors for more servicing and more expenditure and at the same time demands amelioration of taxation which is the only way the governments have of raising the money to pay the costs. It is the same old story.

We do not think for a moment that, in order to meet the trying problems with which they are faced, the representatives of both the Dominion and the provinces will not go the limit in compromising and devising ways and means. There are none of them who want to possess themselves of the means of imposing taxation just for the sake of taxation. All they want is the possession of ability to raise the finances for their respective needs.

If there is a possible way of reaching a common basis of satisfying the various needs, the Ottawa conference should be competent of reaching and embracing it. We do not need to be too discouraged that some satisfactory settlement shall not be reached between the Dominion and the provinces. Indeed, sooner or later one will have to be reached. These are matters that cannot go indefinitely unsettled.

Why Beautification Campaign

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, this year with the co-operation of the Prince Rupert Public Relations Council, is to be congratulated on its perennial enterprise in conducting a campaign to remind citizens that homes need sprucing up, streets and lanes should be cleaned and well-kept, lawns and vacant lots cleared of litter, fences painted, etc. Particularly does this hold true in the spring of the year, when nature is bursting with new life and color.

Civic pride is a feeling that should be fostered by all organizations, and an appeal to civic consciousness by way of a Beautification Campaign is most effective.

The outward appearance of a community reflects the spirit of its citizens. How much more attractive for visitors and tourists to see clean, fresh-looking homes, stores and publie buildings, with flowers, grass and trees in profusion! How much finer for the morale of us all to have a city that sparkles, rather than one with dirty streets, ill-kept houses, drab-looking shops!

A Beautification Campaign is a worthwhile effort and might well be a highlight of the year's activity. In Prince Rupert the drive starts tomorrow and continues for ten days.

PLANS FOR NEW HOME

Preliminaries to Construction of Aged People's Residence Already Under Way

Blueprints for Prince Rupert's new Pioneer's Home have been completed by designer James Hutchison and are now at the City Hall awaiting approval of City Council. Mayor Daggett said today that in his opinion only a few minor changes are necessary to make the design for the Westview building satisfactory.
