Modern Etiquette By ROBERTA LEE

Q. Is it necessary that a person state his reason for declining an invitation?

A. No; while it is not obligatory it is oftentimes a courteous thing to do, and probably will avoid a misunderstanding and resentment.

Q. Is it all right to say, "Mr. Jones, shakes hands with Mr. Smith" when introducing two men?

A. No; this expression is crude. If the two men are well-mannered they will shake hands without being commanded to do so.

Q. Is it correct for a man to sign his full name to his social correspondence, or may he sign merely his initials?

A. He should sign his full name.

The Markets

Abundance of Fruits and Also Vegetables On Local Market

An abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables has appeared on local food store display shelves, most recent of the fruits being cherries which were bringing 69 cents a pound at the week-end. They have now come down 10 cents a pound in all stores. Despite the shortage of boxes, strawberries have been appearing, and are now selling for 35c a basket. California plums are selling at 50 cents a pound.

* In the vegetable stalls, green onions are selling at two bunches for 15 cents. Radishes are the same price. Green peas are 29 cents a pound, rhubarb 10 cents and asparagus 29 cents.

NEW ZEALAND LACKS SLUMS

Dominion Looks Spotless and Freshly-Painted Despite Six Years' War Effort

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WELLINGTON, N.Z., (P)—Despite six years' war effort, New Zealand looks as though it had just emerged from a thorough spring cleaning. Its cities and towns are neat, cream-colored wooden cottages with red and green roofs are bright and clean, and gardens and lawns are well-tended.

There are few slums to be seen in either of the small Dominion's two largest cities, Auckland, northernmost and most important business centre with a population of 220,000, or Wellington the capital which has 150,000 people. Because of the war, there is a general shortage of housing but otherwise life seems well-organized for the 1,500,000 New Zealanders who live on the two big islands which make up the Dominion territory. Rationing of food and clothing is still in force, but rationing scales are adequate and people are voluntarily reducing food consumption to help Britain and Europe.

Current scarcity of accommodation is accounted for by the restriction on new building during the war. However, construction is going forward again and houses are springing up all over the country.

In Auckland and Wellington, 400 miles apart on the North Island, there are varied rows of neat state-built homes on which rents come to about $5.00 to $6.00 a week but which remain permanently the property of the government. The large proportion of new homes probably will be state houses because of their low rents.

Central Heating Unnecessary

They are without central heating which New Zealanders, unfrobbled by extreme temperatures, consider to be unnecessary. They have most other modern conveniences. The majority are single-storey bungalows in the accepted style for average New Zealand homes.

Most of the homes have small gardens and in some state-housing areas, incentive to tidiness is given by rent reductions of 50 cents a week for clean properties.

New Zealanders have the attachment for home and property which is a characteristic of the English and regulation of working hours allows them leisure in which to keep the houses and lots spick and span.

The high standard of neatness applies to stores and shops which seem to be spotless wherever you go. Even country restaurants are equipped with the latest electric sterilization devices for utensils. Wood construction is almost universal because lumber is plentiful and cheaper than brick of which probably less than one house in a hundred is built.

Large or elaborate homes are seldom seen among the hundreds of little bungalows. New Zealanders say the country has comparatively few wealthy citizens and comparatively few poor. Apartment buildings are fewer than in Canadian cities though the government has erected several modern apartment blocks.

SIGNS OF TIME

Loggers' and Sawmill Workers' Strike Seemed as Off as Ever Last Night

PRINCE RUPERT, (P)—Settlement of the International Woodworkers' Association strike in the British Columbia lumber industry appeared last night to be as far off as ever. The flat rejection by operators of new union demands, the spokesman for the loggers, R. V. Stuart, said the loggers will resume operations "straightforward acceptance" of the award of Chief Justice Gordon Sloan and charges against the union of "stalling."
