Britain Shows the Way

While the "sound" financiers of Canada's government move slowly and cautiously, the Labor government of Britain proceeds boldly to bring tax relief to the people of the hard-pressed Mother Land. The latest budget of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Dalton, announces the reduction or removal altogether of income tax from many people in the lower brackets and further cuts the excess profits tax, intimating that its complete removal may be expected before long.

Of course, we may be told that this tax relief for Britain is being made possible through the financial assistance she is receiving or expects to get from United States and to a lesser extent from Canada. That may be true but, nevertheless, the fact remains that a measure of relief is being brought to the people who, after all, are more interested in seeing that things are done than introspecting into how they are accomplished.

Canada will soon be getting its budget brought down and there is already keen speculation in what, if any, measure of tax relief may be in store for us now the war is over. It is reasonable to remind ourselves that, even if we may have felt at some times that we were badly done by, we have never borne the burden of taxation these many years on anything like the scale the people of Britain have been called upon to do and have patiently done.

THE CHURCHILLS ENGLAND BOUND-Clad in the nautical attire now as famous as his cigar and "V" sign, Winston Churchill, accompanied by Mrs. Churchill, board the S.S. Queen Mary for the return trip to England. Highlight of the former British prime minister's nine-week visit in the U.S. was his talk at Fulton, Mo., which created international repercussions.
