CAR PRICES INCREASE

SYDNEY, Australia (P) - New British cars are selling in Australia at prices 75 per cent higher than before the war. Prices have increased since the cars arrived in Australia. A small open car quoted recently at $1,600 now is selling for $1,850. Reasons for the increase include increased wages to British workmen, lags in production and world shortages of steels.

Fundamentally, the postal system of China is very similar to Canada's. They make use of air mail, postal notes, money orders and postal savings panks in the same way. Even their mechanical equipment is much the same. but their great difficulty is the lack of sufficient equipment to cope with the huge amount of Alaska, 35,000 pounds, 24c and mail. Despite inflation in China postal rates have been little affected and now are on a par with Canada.
