C.N.R. Leaders Speak of Means of Meeting Transitional Problems

MONTREAL-"In this transition period we can handle our post-war problems and make our railroad stand up to the splendid reputation we earned in the war if we have faith in our organization, know where we are going and believe we can get there." These were the words of B. L. Daly, director, Canadian National Railways, addressing the twentieth annual meeting of the system committee, union management co-operative movement, motive power and car equipment department, which opened Friday in Montreal.

N. B. Walton, C.B.E., executive vice-president, told the delegates who came from all parts of the system, that the railway would meet post-war competition by up-to-date methods, equipment and treatment of the travelling public. He emphasized the value of co-operative movement to the railway and to the country at

"We are anxious to be partners in this industry and to assume our full share of responsibility," said James Corbett, president of transportation and the only way chairman of Carmen, London, Ontario, speaking for the employees. "The money in the bag, how it gets there, how it is spent, is our concern. We are anxious forts," said Mr. Battley. to get the employees to realize Pays Tribute hat their goodwill and co-operation is of value to the industry and to the country."

"Perseverance, patience and co-operation would be needed in this time of transition, said E. R. Battley, chief of motive power and car equipment for the sys-"In the past we have shown

MOST SPECTACULAR FIRE IN CANADA'S HISTORY-$2,500,000 DAMAGE-A score of firemen were treated for burns in the raging infferno at Hull. Que., that cut road, rail and tram traffic from an important route and stopped telephone service to a large section of the city. Piled 75 feet high and covering a four-acre area, thousands of cords of pulpwood were destroyed. Aerial photo shows pile smouldering. Two-thirds of the inter-provincial bridge joining Hull and Ottawa was burned and the huge pulp pile of the E. B. Eddy Co. destroyed. Firemen of both cities fought desperately to keep flames from Eddy plant.
