

WOMEN ARE VALUABLE CIVILIAN JOBS AFTER WAR

Demobilized War Vets Now Busy at Work, Schools, On Farms and In Own Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — As Canada set her sights for the year 1946 saw the 24,000 women left in the Armed Services pack their uniforms in mothballs and head into the busy world of civilian industry, back to school or university classes for furthering. Although a number were either married or enlisted or married in the services, and chose to private life, officials of the Department of Veterans Affairs say the figure is not as has been generally supposed. Demobilization of Canada's 48,000 servicewomen is nearly completed, although nurses have remained in permanent forces and there are a few women dieticians in the Air Force. D.V.A. officials say that across Canada employers have recognized the woman veteran as a valuable to any organization.

The woman veteran is showing same adaptability, efficiency and dependability she had in the services," said official. "All this has been noticed by the employer who found she pays him a good deal as an employee."

Those now in the employ field the National Employment Service reports that up Sept. 1 more than 10,000 women servicewomen were in employment. It is believed even a larger number work without the aid of E.S. Many were re-instated former employers. Some businesses of their own as gift shops, secretarial work, and dress shops. Those specialized branches — everything from raising to frog-farming. Of the total number now employed approximately 5,000 were physicians, most of whom have returned to their professions. Many veterans now are holding responsible positions in all parts of the world, in U.N.R.R.A., in government departments in large business houses.

Generally speaking the rate of employment is "considerable" among former ser-vicewomen than it is among servicemen, said D.V.A. officials. The women have gone back into the civilian stream more smoothly than the men.

Within the next year D.V.A.

officials expect the total number of women formerly in the Armed Services, who avail themselves of the government's provision for training of veterans, may exceed 20 per cent of the women who enlisted. At the present time more than 8,000 are trained or undergoing training for more than 100 different occupations.

Approximately 6,000 took vocational training under the D.V.A. plan, and more than 2,000 chose university training or other professional or semi-professional training in various non-university schools or colleges.

A D.V.A. report reveals that women veterans in universities are studying everything from law, architecture and medicine to journalism and social work. Many are training as nurses. On the vocational side they're taking such things as hairdressing, stenography, book-binding, linotype operating and photography.

Although no exact records are available it is understood that a little more than 30 per cent of the women were married at the time of discharge. However, officials lay to "wishes thinking" the occasional newspaper report that most servicewomen are married and not interested in training or employment.

"Many of those who are married must work to supplement their husband's earnings," said one official. "Others have abilities and skills which are as urgently needed in peace time as in war."

SEÑORITAS FIND CANADA IS COLD

From Below the Rio Grande They Came to Winnipeg to Study English

WINNIPEG (CP)—Usually at this time of year Canadians take one look at their parkas and heavy balls and start dreaming about the sunny south, but snow drifts and a north wind didn't deter two winsome young señoritas who arrived here from Mexico recently.

They admitted they had been shivering as the train had carried them through "colder and colder" places and 19-year-old Enriqueta Morales said, "Oh, it's so very cold. I've seen snow before, but oh, it's terribly cold."

The girls — Esther and Enriqueta Morales of Mexico City — were sent here by their father to study English. Last year he sent the sisters to a business college in Quincy, Illinois. They roomed together and did all their chatting in their native Spanish . . . which didn't help their English a great deal. However, this year things have been arranged differently. The sisters will stay in separate homes so that they may learn to speak the English language more quickly and adapt themselves to the Canadian way of life.

Mr. Morales, a manufacturer's agent in Mexico, last year sent his 15-year-old daughter, Carmen, to a convent in Ottawa to learn English. But the cold weather defeated her and she scurried home early.

The first thing the sisters did when they arrived here was to buy warm coats. Now they are settling down to routine—sightseeing, classes and extra-curricular activities. They have enrolled at the YWCA for swimming and basketball and joined a business sorority.

And a year from now, when they return to their native land, it is planned that the girls will be thoroughly conversant in both English grammar and idiomatic English and also have pleasant memories of their visit "up north."

KINSMEN HOLD LADIES' NIGHT

Kinsmen club members last night put their gallant feet forward, exchanged their regular meeting procedure for a turkey dinner to which they invited their ladies, then wound up the evening by attending the theatre in a group. The dinner was held in the Civic Centre cafeteria and was featured by Christmas fare, after which a turkey was raffled, being won by Edward Garner. Following the dinner, the group, consisting of about 15 Kinsmen and their ladies, attended the Capitol Theatre.

1½ MILLION PAPER TOWELS PER YEAR!
Javex Liquid Sunshine 21¢
AT YOUR DEALER'S

Is paper YOUR business? If it is, the wages of your workers are paid, in part, by people like ourselves who purchase huge quantities of paper products every year. Even if paper is not your business, the prosperity of paper workers means additional dollars circulating in the Canadian market—and that concerns every one of us. True, this Company is in the business of mining, refining metals and making chemicals and chemical fertilizers—but we use the amazing amount of 1½ million paper towels a year in the normal course of our business.

Production of these towels means money paid in wages, contributing to the wide variety of jobs needed to maintain the many thousands of workers in Canada's great paper industry. Paper towels are just one of a myriad supply items needed in this Company's operations, each of which items means wages and jobs in other Canadian industries and in the various services which bring these supplies to our door.
