BEVIN TAKES LEAD

IT IS GRATIFYING to read the forthright statement of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin that if the Big Four foreign ministers cannot come to some basis for the formulation of peace treaties, the British government itself will go ahead making separate pacts to bring an end to war which it should be remembered still is only in a state of suspension through armistice.

The statement of Mr. Bevin before the British Labor Party on this subject is also timely. Possibly it may provide the spark of leadership that will bring something definite in the way of agreement at the conference of foreign ministers which is about to convene again. Certainly some sort of initiative is required.

Mr. Bevin mentioned no names but it was clear to whom he was referring when he said "no one nation is going to keep me in a state of war forever with other countries." There will be general agreement with his comment that "We cannot go on this way. It is indefensible."

QUIET UNREASONABLE

THE CITY COUNCIL has been informed by the federal architect, under whose department the control of the local Post Office buildings comes, that local business people and others who like to get their box mail early on mornings after trains come in cannot do so until 7:45 a.m. because the Post Office was being used as a waiting room for the bus and the lobby could not be opened earlier. The city council says that they can do nothing about it.

If such is the case, it is to be supposed then that nothing can be done about loitering in Post Office premises at any time although signs warning against such practice have often been seen. By the same argument should people persist in loitering within the lobbies, the lobbies could be closed at any time of the day and the public further inconvenienced.

The Post Office, as we see it, is a public utility whose primary purpose is to move the mail according to the people's needs and requirements. It should be simple enough, we would think, if necessary to maintain a reasonable postal function, for the city to have the simple police patrol provided necessary to prevent the building being "left littered

MRS. WESLEY CLARK.

PRINCE GEORGE, QUES.

PRINCE GEORGE (Special to Daily News) — Mrs. Wesley G. Clark died here this morning and the funeral is expected to take place Saturday. Mrs. Clark was the wife of the local representative of the provincial Department of Labor who is also prominent in Junior Chamber of Commerce affairs here.

WORLD'S largest brand of evaporated milk! Canada's largest! There are many brands of evaporated milk—but of them all, more homemakers and mothers consistently buy Carnation than any other brand. That's a great tribute to a great product!

Of course it isn't an accident. It is the result of a long record of dependable quality, carefully maintained. Of doctors finding Carnation a fine food for bottle-fed babies; of mothers seeing children thrive on Carnation as a drinking milk; of whole families enjoying milk-rich dishes made with Carnation. For drinking or eating or "creaming"—you'll find that Carnation will become your favorite milk.

with papers and cigarette stubs." As it is now the public has to be inconvenienced in its business because no authority is willing or able to provide such a patrol for a public service.

It seems quite an unreasonable situation which could be simply enough remedied.

ON WATERING A LAWN

A BOUT THIS TIME of the year the man for whom watering the lawn and garden is a rite as well as a contenting pleasure begins to have his innings. From now until September he can loaf away an hour or so in the evening while seeming to be industrious, supplementing nature's contribution to the green of his lawn and the color of his garden and widening his philosophic horizons through contemplation.

The true lawn watering enthusiast is definitely not the type who attaches the hose in a hurry, directs a blasting stream to the grass for a few minutes and then tosses it back into the cellar. Nor is he the type who uses a sprinkler and goes about things he considers more important.

The real enthusiast takes at least an hour about it and scorns sprinklers. He works best if he has a garden chair or verandah step on which to sit. There should also be a stretch of lawn or garden well within the limit of the stream of water he controls. Larger plots involve tiresome walking about, and dragging of hose across grass, both destructive to contemplation. A deep, well-filled pipe that will last a long while is almost a necessity.

Given these our man is almost content. But he must first adjust the nozzle to just the right spray, fine enough to provide a light fall but strong enough to reach the far border. He scorns those who cannot make up their minds and are forever whirling the nozzle from one spray to another.

And then there is the matter of the sun. Perfect conditions call for a chair facing so that the setting sun will shine over his shoulder and into the spray, dreaming up delightful rainbows that can be moved to and fro with the easy swing of a wrist.

Making your own rainbows is one of the nicest things about watering the lawn under this system. Another is shooting the water high into a tree so that it falls through the leaves, giving all the delights of cooling rain with none of its discomforts.

Most important of all is the time all this affords for contemplation. Some will hold that a man lazy enough to sit for an hour watering a lawn won't think of anything useful. But it's our idea that some of the most satisfying thinking ever done has been done on front lawns in the cool of evening with the music of water falling a peaceful accompaniment.

NORTH COUNTRY IS ATTRACTION

The tourist attractions of north central British Columbia were affirmed again today by an American tourist who arrived in the city last night after a 2,000-mile motor trip from San Francisco. "You have a beautiful country and, with a little promotion, you could have lots of people from the United States as tourists," W. A. Imeson told the Daily News.

Mr. Imeson, who spent the war years travelling over the globe as chief engineer in the American merchant marine, is on a holiday, visiting his uncle, Charles Sieh, at Smithers. He sees great progress in the country since a former visit here ten years ago.

"Your roads up here aren't bad at all," Mr. Imeson said. "Of course, they aren't super highways like we have in the States, but they aren't too bad. I drove up as far as Smithers ten years ago, and the roads really were bad then."

Mr. Imeson, who made the trip in five and a half days driving time, expects to stay at Smithers for a few weeks to get in some fishing and possibly some hunting. He drove Mr. Sieh to Prince Rupert for medical treatment. The two will return to Smithers tonight.

ALD. HAM THANKED

Editor,

Daily News:

May I take this opportunity through the medium of your publication to thank Ald. Ham for his noble effort in trying to convince his colleagues that the work being done on our city streets is far from satisfactory.

Ald. Ham shares the opinion of at least ninety percent of the motoring public here and, if the portion of Seventh Avenue East from McBride to King Edward School is an example of the engineering skill and general ability of our hired help, something had better be done about the matter before it goes too far.

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS

Editor,

Daily News—

May more power be bestowed upon this organization whose motives are based upon love—regard for unfortunate men.

The alcoholic slave must first revive his love for himself, regain his self respect, just as the sinner must first open his heart and make himself receptive before Christ will enter in.

The foundation of Christianity is love and service, not religious sects or creeds; although some religionists thinking that ritual is the only suitable thread, spin a cocoon around themselves and expect to find eternal life therein.

Christ's parable of the man who fell amongst thieves is symbolic. Hatred, indifference breed destruction, but love is constructive. May multitudes of drunks live until they can say: "God, using Alcoholics Anonymous, saved me from a drunkard's grave and by the power of Jesus Christ raised me from spiritual death to be a dear son and worker for him."

CHARGES OF "PIRACY" BY TAXI DRIVERS

Charges of "piracy" among the city's taxi operators were made public in city council Tuesday night. Taxi operator Joseph van Wallegham complained to council that certain other drivers were using his parking stand to get patronage.

In a petition signed by several operators with taxi stands on Third and Second Avenues, council was asked to put a stop to such unethical conduct. Mr. Van Wallegham complained that, within the last three or four weeks, his business had been "seriously hampered" by other drivers using his stand.

His communication named three other operators who allegedly parked in front of his stand to grab customers meant for Mr. Van Wallegham. Council didn't know just what could be done about it.

Alderman Arnold pointed out that operators are not given exclusive parking rights on Third Avenue and, therefore, anyone could pull up in front of a taxi stand.

Alderman Youngs recognized the signs of unfair competition as a result of the city being "overrun" with taxis.

The matter was referred to the licensing committee with power to get legal advice.

Freedom of the press has been dearly bought. The first newspaper issued in North America, appearing September 25, 1890, was suppressed before the second issue could be circulated.

PERRY ENTHUSES OVER HIGHWAY

One of Loveliest Scenic Routes

In Canada—Urge Repairs

"One of the most lovely scenic highway routes in Canada with a climax of beauty amid mountain grandeur in the lower Skeena between Terrace and Prince Rupert" is the way H. G. Perry enthuses following his arrival by motor from Prince George.

Outside of two or three spots which need prompt attention, the highway is in excellent condition, said Mr. Perry.

The most difficult part of the road is the Hazelton-Kitwanga section but nearer Prince Rupert are a few spots where conditions arising from winter slides mar the driving—conditions which need "immediate but inexpensive repairs."

Mr. Perry has been here to preside over the board of arbitration to settle the price at which the YMCA war services building will be taken over as the return to Prince George at the week-end.
