MRS. MARTIN PASSES AWAY

Terrace Woman of Twenty-Five Years' Standing Dies After Long Illness

Death, occurring early last evening at the Prince Rupert General Hospital following a long illness, removed an esteemed woman of Terrace in the person of Mrs. Grace E. Martin, wife of Walter J. Martin, well known farmer of the interior town. She had been seriously ill for four months.

Born in Kansas, 66 years ago, Mrs. Martin came west as a girl with her parents to Port Angeles, Washington, where she attended elementary and high schools. In 1906 she was married to Mr. Martin and the couple first took up residence at Everett, Washington, then moving to Charlo, Montana. Coming to Canada in 1919, they settled first at Crossfield, Alberta, and two years later moved to Terrace where they have since made their home.

Besides the widower, Mrs. Martin leaves two daughters—Mrs. A. E. (Marguerite) Wood of Prince Rupert and Mrs. J. M. (Dorothea) Julseth of Terrace. There are three grandchildren. Funeral arrangements are in the hands of B.C. Undertakers and the funeral will be held at Terrace Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Julseth, who had been here with her mother before she passed away, leaves this evening on her return to Terrace. Mr. and Mrs. Wood will accompany the remains to Terrace Friday night.

President of Women's Clubs Tells of Incidents in Russia

WASHINGTON, (C)—Perhaps a woman would understand this exchange which took place at a news conference when Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which has many Canadian affiliates, told of her recent 25-day tour of Russia.

"I enjoyed shopping in Russia tremendously," Mrs. Dickinson said.

"Oh, what did you buy?" a woman reporter asked, eagerly.

"Not a thing," Mrs. Dickinson replied, and while the male reporters struggled with that one she added something about shortages and exchange troubles.

Mrs. Dickinson, whose published sketches fail to mention her age but who must be sixtyish although she doesn't look it, told of a Russian man dinner companion who asked: "How many years have you?"

"I told him how many years I had," she said, "and he became very excited. He passed the word around the party and all the men seemed excited. My interpreter told me they were amazed that a woman of my age would even leave her fireside to say nothing of flying half around the world with a party of strange men."

From that moment the men treated her as tenderly as if she were an old lady, offering their arms and "almost wanting to carry me around," she said, "and I told the men in our party they might take some lessons on how to help ladies get about."

With Party Of Six Mrs. Dickinson, who comes from a prominent Keene, N.H., family, went to Russia with a party of six men of the American Society for Russian Relief who went there on invitation to see how relief materials were being used.

"I am virtually a teetotaler as you all know," she told the reporters. "But my friends insisted I try vodka and drink it in the proper fashion—in one gulp. I did try it and I didn't taste anything. I didn't feel anything either," she added.

But, she said, a friend who had been facing a tonsil operation tried the experiment with her. "She told me the vodka had so burned her throat that it cured her tonsil trouble. She hasn't been bothered since."

Mrs. Dickinson said she had been asked if American women had equal rights as they had in Russia. "And I had to admit that we didn't—I was so ashamed. And they were so sympathetic."

She said she was embarrassed too when the Russian women, who do not indulge in many racial animosities, asked her about the Negro question in the United States and the anti-Semitism that exists in some areas.

The Russian women, she said, were friendly and desperately anxious for peace and friendship with other peoples, particularly American. "But I am sure, if their country were again attacked, they would go out and fight side by side with the men," Mrs. Dickinson said.

Unusual Story in "Sentimental Journey" with John Payne and Maureen O'Hara

Drama of the tender, poignant type in a heart-warming story of modern family type features the current offering "Sentimental Journey" at the Capitol Theatre. The picture has been delighting theatre-goers during the past two days and concludes its engagement with this evening's showings. Incidentally, the presentation of this picture marks the new showing schedule of a single afternoon matinee and two evening shows each day. Local movie patrons seem to be readily adjusting themselves to the change.

The quite unusual story of "Sentimental Journey" concerns the career of John Payne, busy show producer, after the sudden illness of his actress-wife, beautiful Maureen O'Hara, and the finding of the little nine-year-old girl, Connie Marshall, who is to become their adopted child. Dramatic circumstances led to the death of Miss O'Hara after she bravely tries to carry on, the story developing into a beautifully happy ending.

Other important members of the cast in "Sentimental Journey" are William Bendix, Sir
