Netmen's Strike Called-New Methof Loading-Alaska Cod Fishing Gets Body Blow

Only a few native netmen on the Skeena River are affected by the strike call made the latter part of this week by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (A.F. of L.), the most of the workers on nets having yet to reach jobs in this area. The strike the close of the halibut season. Services work in India. of the netmen was called in support of a demand that the companies and Regional War*

Labor Board come to an agreeunion is seeking an increase in ver, is fitting it out for halibut gear for the season which wages as well as the establish- fishing, and is reported also to scheduled to open May 1. ment of an eight-hour day or 208-hour month.

Mariners are advised that Fog Rocks light, Fisher Channel, is not burning, but will be relighted at the earliest opportunity.

A new method of cargo handling on coastwise ships may be built into a projected vessel for Union Steamships Ltd. The principle is designed for speedier handling of cargo and to reduce handling costs. Instead of being swung out of the ship's hold on portable platforms as at present, cargo, by the new principle, will be hoisted from it by an elevator which will not only rise to the level of the natch coaming but above it. The elevator, it is understood, will be able to hoist a load of cargo to the level FOR SALE - 6-room furnished of the wharf, from which a gangway can be connected. Longshoremen then will be able to take it directly off the ship either by hand trucks or mechanical freight handlers. For cargo handling at low tide, the arrangement seems ideal but how it will work at tide levels which bring the ship's side up over the level of the wharf is something that will have to be seen. It is likely that the present sling method will have to be used then.

A surprise move by the American Fish and Wild Life Service which set back the opening date for the American black cod season in inside Alaska waters from March 15 to May 1 is causing Alaska black codders to fish outside the three-mile limit and deliver their catches to Seattle. It is also causing quite a stir in Ketchikan. Protests have been sent to Washington in a volume reminiscent of Prince Rupert's FOR SALE - Modern 6-room recent Civic Centre and High way telegram bombardments. The arguments advanced by the Fish and Wild Life service that the postponement is a conservation measure are falling on deaf ears in Ketchikan. Said Emil Gregorson, skipper of the black codder Garland: "There is something dirty afoot. I am taking my gear and ice aboard and heading south where I can fish.' A second blackcodder, Agne Blendheim of the Alice, announced similar action. Canadian and U.S. continental waters are open to black cod fishing.

Most of the boats in Prince Rupert's halibut fleet lying at their winter berths are being made ready for the opening of he fishing season. In addition minor hull repairs which have been going on all winter, some major changes have been made in a few of the vessels. Notable among these is the rebuilding of the halibutter Selma H., owned by Jack Strand, which has been lengthened seven feet to a new length of 48 feet. The Anker A., owned by Otto Jerstad, has had a new pilot house installed and the Atli, William Bussey, recently came off the Co-op grid after having a larger wheel installed. She also has a new engine. The Larry H. has been standing on a grid at Cow Bay undergoing minor hull repairs. The Rodney P., owned by Kaien Industries, has been in process for some time of receiving a complete new upper works, which includes new pilot house and deck. The Louise, E. Skogmo, has been re-! ceiving minor hull repairs at Cow Bay. Other vessels, too, have been getting the necessary amount of attention to keep them shipshape for their heavy summer work.

Additions to the fleet this year include the 48-foot Five Princes, built during the winter for Jack Prince at the Cow Bay Boat Works; a 45-footer just | completed for Chris Viklin by Edward Wahl of Digby Island, and possibly a 45-foot halibutter for Elmer Anderson, which is now building and may be completed in time for part of the
