More Babies Born, Therefore More Quads, Say Experts

By Howard W. Blakeslee Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP) More twins, triplets and quads are being born in the United States since the war began than

The Bureau of the Census figures are: multiple births in 1933-24,220, and in 1942 a rise to 29,421.

At first glance it looks as if Mars is adding romance and mystery to war marriages. Investigation supports the romance, wipes out all the mystery, and gives Mars a bad score when it comes to producing multiples.

The reason there were more multiple births in 1942 than in 1933 was because many more babies were born, because the U.S. birth rate went up. More girls got married; a rush to the altar, which it will be recalled, started with the adoption of Selective Service before United States entered combat.

Along with the rising birth rate there naturally were more twins and other multiples. There is no special credit to

Mars. What's to his discredit in this multiple baby business is that the percentage of multiples actually declined. In 1933, of all babies born in the United States, 11 and a fraction per cent per thousand were twins, triplets or quads. The percentage stayed at 11 until 1940. Percentage Dropped

Beginning with the latter year, the percentage dropped to 10.8, went down one decimal point the next year and again a similar decimal point in 1942, the last year of completed census figures on babies.

The medical reason for the But an explanation which comes from statistics of birth rates is entirely clear.

CANADIANS ADVANCE THROUGH LOWLAND'S MUD-Heavy rains and the smashing of dykes by the retreating Germans near the Belgian-Dutch frontier, made both roads and countryside a regular sea of mud, throwing added obstacles in the path of the advancing Canadians. Committee Suggests Plan of Social Priorities to Halt Birth Rate Decline

LONDON, Nov. 23- A scheme of practical social privileges or priorities for parents - first choice of new houses, and priority for family travel and entertainment-has been advocated by the Tory Reform Committee as one way to "dignify" parenthood and stop the decline in the birth rate.

Among other suggestions in the committee's new pamphlet, "Tomorrows Children," are:

A domestic service plan, with national status, and help for mothers before, during and after confinement; Children's "parking places" with an ancillary "sitters" service to care for children while parents go out together; Maternity institutions based on the family unit, with private rooms rather than wards: Remedies to prevent landlords from discriminating against families with children.

"(Sir William) Beveridge and all the rest will be so much moonshine with a declining population and always more coming on the pension list and fewer to the plow, tractor and the lathe,' says the pamphlet.

It suggested that each married couple should on the average leave behind not less than two children and preferably three. Economic barriers should be removed so men and women would marry earlier in life.

"The effect of children today is to reduce the parents' and the whole family's standard of living in the material sense. Instead of being an economic as-TERRACE, Nov. 24-There is set, each child is equivalent for
