THE ALBERTA ELECTION

The provincial election fight in Alberta, according to all observers, is centred between the Social Credit government and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and, while election results are a hazardous thing to speculate upon, the consensus appears to be that the government, if it is returned all, will have nothing like the majorities it has enjoyed since first William Aberhart and his Social Crediters first came into power nearly eight years ago.

The Social Credit party, in its appeal to Alberta voters, pledges to fight acquisition of control of money and credit by private monopoly and promises assistance for all war veterans and improvement in agricultural services. Refunding of the public debt in terms fair and equitable to all and continuation of the pay-as-you-go financial policy are also stressed. The platform also advocates educational advancement, a home building program and just administration of labor laws. Tax-free and rent-free crown lands for ex-service men for three years and payment for land in crop returns for another seven years features postwar rehabilitation. Industrial research and development and further legislation for the benefit of farmers and social benefits are further Social Credit pledges.

Progressive application of the principle of public ownership in development of Alberta's natural resources, major industries and distributive services is pledged by the C.C.F. in Alberta. Profits from petroleum and natural gas resources would be used by a C.C.F. administration to provide free medical services, free hospitalization, free maternity care and free rural nursing services. Financing of co-operative or government buying of farm machinery and parts to reduce cost to farmers, establishment of public-owned packing plants and flour mills and co-operative enterprise in processing and marketing of agricultural products are main objectives. The party's 12-point platform is based on complete co-operation in making available all Alberta resources in the war effort, assistance to farmers in the fight for prices that will prevent any repetition of the depressed state of agriculture preceding the war, a housing program, taxation reduction, and just labor legislation, including collective bargaining.

HOUSING PLAN

braith's tour of the country. "We have no intention of seeing a home owner suffer disappointment because somebody built a factory alongside," he asserted. "Before we offer loan facilities to a city or town we must be sure that it is adequately planned and zoned. However, although we are ready to offer them help in town planning, we have no intention of bullying any city into following plans which we lay out."

PRINCE RUPERT IS WELL LAID OUT

Mr. Galbraith said that to his knowledge Prince Rupert is one of the most satisfactorily laid out cities on the continent.

He pointed out that the present act has nothing to do with a measure passed at the end of the first Great War designed to provide homes for returning soldiers. At that time homes were built during a period of inflated values. In the economic slump which followed many individuals and municipalities which had been forced to guarantee the loans were left disproportionately in debt.

"The plan is based on the investigations of the James Committee which has come to the conclusion that in the next 10 years between 500,000 and 700,000 new homes will be needed in Canada," Mr. Galbraith explained. "It is a solid part of the post-war planning scheme."

Another part of the act provides for the construction of low-rental houses by limited dividend companies, with profits limited to three percent. This set-up Mr. Galbraith admitted, would probably be better suited to large cities, than in communities the size of Prince Rupert.

Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith were taken on a tour of the city by Mayor Diggert before boarding last night's train for Edmonton. They will visit several prairie cities on their way back to Ottawa.

Sport Chat

The Southern England sports meet progressed towards the high jump event when the field announcer warned athletes and the hundreds of spectators that a flying bomb was in the vicinity. The meet continued. A couple of minutes later the announcer shouted: "The bomb is nearly overhead, all those who can should take cover. Lie on the ground." Most did, a little self-consciously and a little indignant that such things should interrupt their pleasure. A few women remained standing. They didn't want to soil their frocks. A stout little man in tweeds looked around scornfully at the mass assemblage of prone persons and stood his ground. "It's passing by," he said, tracing the course of the robot across the sky. "Oh, oh, I'm wrong," he added in the same breath, and threw himself down. There was a deafening explosion and a plume of dark smoke shot into the sky. The little man rose shamefaced and remarked: "It makes you feel such a fool, mate, doesn't it?" And the sports meet went on.

For the fourth time a British championship fight between Freddie Mills and Jack London has been postponed, this time in accordance with the wishes of the authorities. Previous postponements, extending over the past year, came about through injuries to London in training. The fight, one of two scheduled title matches that made up the greatest boxing show of the war was scheduled to be held July 8 in London's Tottenham Hotspur football grounds. The contests later were fixed for July 29 at the same place. When Mills and London get together, it will be to settle the British and Empire heavyweight titles vacated by retirement of Len Harvey. Mills, youthful, one-time booth boxer from Bournemouth, holds the British and Empire light-heavyweight titles and is favored to beat London, 29-year old West Hartlepool giant. In the other postponed match, Eric Boon will defend his British lightweight crown against Wales' pride, Ronnie James.

Campbell's CHICKEN NOODLE SOUP

NO NEED TO COAX the youngsters to meals when they sniff the simmering fragrance of Campbell's Chicken Noodle Soup! They love its grand chicken goodness... the tender pieces of chicken in the rich, glistening broth... the succulent, tasty egg noodles.

good old-fashioned way — starting with fine, plump chickens—simmering the stock very slowly and carefully to bring out all the delicious flavor, then adding plenty of hearty egg noodles.

That's why so many mothers make this easy-to-fix soup the satisfying "main dish" of cold summer meals. Try it for lunch or supper soon. Ask for it at your grocer's. Look for the Red-and-White Label.

And it's such a nourishing dish, so good for them! You see, Campbell's is not just noodle soup, but Chicken Noodle Soup. We make it in the
