Prince Rupert And the "Y"

(Being a series in instalments by Mrs. Dorothy Garbutt, the Hostess here)

(Conclusion)

Under what I would call outside jobs building up morals and general services I would like to group a few anecdotes. One of the first services I was able to render was getting women's clothes for one of the Scottish concerts. This was for an Alice Blue Gown number. Mrs. Bremner was able to gather shoes and a hat together and Annette very kindly let us have a dress. Annette has since furnished clothes for several concerts much to the gratitude of the boys.

My queerest job was when a service wife asked me to come and bath an old lady where she was staying and mending a sailor's uniform while he stayed in barracks because he had no other uniform to wear.

I think my happiest job was the time I was able to introduce two German boys to each other. One of them had an uncle serving as leader to Russian forces as he had fled from Germany because of his beliefs and the other was a boy whose parents had sent him and his sister to Chicago at the beginning of the

Terrace Girl Is Bride Here

A quiet wedding took place in First United Church manse on Monday afternoon when Gwendolyn Mildred Hogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hogan, of Terrace, became the bride of Corporal Robert Myles Thornington, Royal Canadian Air Force, son of Alfred Thornington, Toronto, Ontario.

The Rev. J. A. Donnell officiated at the ceremony and witnesses were Mrs. J. A. Donnell and Ernest H. Taft.

The bride was formerly employed at Terrace.

seen him since. Both young men Hitler regime and had never formed a fast friendship.

During the month of December I inaugurated a parcel wrapping service and call loudly for volunteers whom I call my parcel packin' mamas. Again the Prince Rupert ladies come to the fore and, despite the rush of Christmas and the many home duties, I never lacked helpers.

On Sundays, when the hall is packed, I usually put up two framed pictures which subtly remind without ordering the boys that it is Sunday by the legend which says "Have you been to church today?" Mr. Silversides did these for me and made a most charming little landscape of a church on a lavender background. It is attractive and I like to think does bring some of the boys in the churches.

COMEDY OF COLLEGE IS FILM FARE

Dual romance, collegiate antics and the comical attempts of a pair of teen-age youngsters to break up their mother's second marriage provide hilarity in "Young Ideas," a story of youth and college, coming Wednesday and Thursday to the Capitol Theatre. It provides Susan Peters with her first starring role, appearing with Herbert Marshall and Mary Astor.

Susan and her brother (Elliott Reid) disapprove the marriage of their mother (Miss Astor) to a tweedy chemistry professor (Marshall). So they plot to break up the match, and set the entire college in a furore in the process. They noise it about that a spy book written by their mother, who is a noted novelist, was based on her own experiences. Thus they hope to scandalize the faculty. They really start a sensation when they inveigle their dignified stepfather into a shady night club and get him into a jitterbug contest. Then, through a dramatic twist, everything straightens out.

Allyn Joslyn is a dextrous literary agent. Richard Carlson plays the dramatic instructor whose love for Susan forms an important point in the plot.

Sgt. and Mrs. B. R. Tritschler left this afternoon on a trip to Vancouver.
