Christianity Is Ever Struggling

Area Army Padre C. E. Mason said at the Armistice Day cenotaph ceremony that, as long as men embraced the Christian faith there would be struggle for the history of the Bible showed that evil men had always resisted the works of good ones. He pictured David, "perhaps the greatest of the early prophets,"

The dead of the First Great War and the present one were broadcast a statement by Messrs. to return to Vancouver after meeting last night, approved heroes who had sacrificed their ness and truth. Padre Mason concluded with the hopeful spirit of the "Battle Hymn of ing with the hospital board. It the Republic" beginning with the lines: ings to a by-law permitting the
