TO ENFORCE CURFEW LAW

Parents of Children Are Responsible. Tobacco Act Will Also Be Enforced The city Curfew Bylaw, which forbids children under 14 years of age to be on the streets after 10 o'clock during the summer months, will be rigidly enforced from now on, Staff Sergeant F. W. Gallagher said this morning...

Instructions to enforce the by-law rigidly were received from the city council which has received complaints from the Parents-Teachers' Association, and the Housewives' League. According to the bylaw, it is unlawful for children to be on the streets, unless properly attended, after 10 o'clock in the summer months and after 8:30 in the winter months. It is the duty of a police officer to warn the child to go home and if he refuses, or is found on the street after the warning to take him home. The child's parents are then liable to prosecution. Enforcement of the Juvenile Smoking Act will also be more rigid.

Inmates of Old Men's Home Live and Sometimes Die in Three Dark, Crowded Rooms

At 2:30 on the morning of December 24, 1943, an elderly man died on a cot in the rear of the Dyer Apartments in this city. At 7:30 the same morning eight other elderly men sat down to their breakfast in the presence of the corpse. A bedridden man of 84 in helpless condition lies within a few feet of a table where eight men eat and in a room where six men sleep and spend a large part of their day...

GRIM CIRCUMSTANCES OF OLD MAN'S DEATH The fact that Clesson Hawley died on December 24, 1943, in the Old Men's Home, and not in the General Hospital, was due to the unexpectedness of his passing. The fact that his body remained to companion his erstwhile fellow inmates for seven hours after his death was due to the inadequacies of the place where he had latterly and finally died. Clesson Hawley passed into his final sleep in a dormitory that was also used as a dining room. His body remained there because it was more than inconvenient for the undertaker's men to carry the heavy casket through awkwardly placed doorways and 50 yards out onto the street until the late darkness of the winter morning had lightened.

South Hazelton Girl Is Enlisted Miss Martha Ann Brown, 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Brown of South Hazelton, has enlisted in the Canadian Women's Army Corps and will be leaving her home in the interior on Wednesday morning's eastbound train for Vancouver.
