The Civic Election . . .

The civic election is over. We have chosen by the majority of our preferences those whom we desire to conduct the business of the municipality. Now it is up to us to forget any differences of choice and, confident that the persons we have appointed will measure up to the responsibilities entailed, give them our co-operation and support. They will certainly need that co-operation and support in carrying on the duties which have been entrusted to them.

The results of the aldermanic polling were close enough to indicate clearly that no particular faction has any stranglehold on the preferment of the voters of the city. It may be assumed that the electors will be looking for results in the carrying of city affairs and will not have patience with the promotion of political and economic some cases at least was personal rather than for tickets.

The ratepayers certainly made it plain enough that they considered no good and sufficient reasons had been advanced as to why the city should go into the public transportation business at this time.

tive, which is the complete socialist revolution — taking over by government of all business, big and little.

Eventually this would mean that every farm, every store, every shoe shine parlor, as well as the great mercantile, financial and industrial enterprises would come under the direct control of a political party.

Convention delegates boasted freely and frankly that such complete domination was the ultimate aim. Only on the timing was there disagreement.

Die hards from British Columbia favored advocating such a step immediately. More subtle political strategists from Ottawa would wait until after the CCF won a general election. The latter viewpoint was summed up candidly by National Secretary Lewis who stated that he would not take second place to any CCF spokesman in advocating complete socialism but that "at the present time I am concerned with winning an election."

That lets the CCF cat right out of the bag. First win an election with frontal attacks on the so-called big interests in which support will be sought from little business, white collared workers and the farmer. Then if the party wins, drop the mask and proceed to socialize everything.

And that is what they would have ideas merely as such. The voting in to do, if the CCF won, because socialism is "whole hog" or nothing.
