'TARGET BERLIN' TO SHOW HERE

Will Be Another Event in Local Victory Loan Drive.

"Target-Berlin," National Film Board's current release for its Industrial Circuits, tells a dramatic story that is 100 percent Canadian. Thirty-eight thousand workers on the job in this province alone will se this powerful film, which is a special feature for the Victory Loan. It will be shown at the Prince Rupert Dry Dock between April 24 and 29.

It tells the story of one of Canada's greatest wartime triumphs—the building of the first Canadian Lancaster, world's largest night bomber. From the arrival in Canada of the precious blueprints on microfilm two years ago to the first dramatic raid of the plane over blacked-out Berlin, the film is tense with modern epic.

The Lancaster carries more bombs than any other plane. Its bomb bay alone would hold a whole Spitfire. Historic moments in this 100 percent Canadian film include the excitement in the Government-owned Ontario factory when the order for the giant first came through with the subsequent reorganizing of the whole plant and the gathering from all across the Dominion of thousands of workers and specialists; then, finally the checking of the last rivet as the mighty plane rolls off the final Assembly line 18 months later.

There arrives by air from Britain a crew of six young men, specially picked Canadian veterans fresh from the skies over enemy-held Europe. Especially memorable is the scene outside the factory, as the overalled workers hand over their first Lancaster to the capable little crew, and watch the great plane rise from the yard, and sail off seawards over the farmlands of Ontario. Then, journey's end, after the long cold crossing of ice-berg dotted Atlantic, and the Canadian boys land their prize at its English airdrome.

Soon afterwards, the factory radio back home brings word of a new raid on Germany. This time the Canadian-built Lancaster has taken part. Word goes from mouth to mouth among the workers, now busy on another mighty bomber: "Say, did you hear? Q-for-Queenie was raiding Berlin last night. That's our baby — our Lancaster. She got back safely too. Did a swell job."

This film documents a tremendous production job that made possible a tremendous fighting job—an all-Canadian show. This is a tribute to the workers who will see the film, and a tribute too to the brave young Canadians seen in living shots, taken in their own plane, as they release their bombs over the searchlight and ack-ack hell of their target—Berlin.
