We Are Lucky ...

At this time of year, when the vast majority of us are comfortable and safe, it would be well to compare our lot with that of others. We have some rationing, shortages and many restrictions. But the average Canadian has been pretty lucky. Here we are, after the fifth wartime Christmas and New Year, and practically all of us have a sound roof over our heads, our children are safe and happy, getting their education and their health looked after, and we know definitely where our next meal and many more are coming from.

How different had we been European! How different had we lived in Britain! Some of us may complain about the difficulty in securing beverages, of the shortage of a few things, of the lack of icing on our cake or of chilliness in our living rooms.

The very nature of our complaints shows our blessedness.

The Daily Newspaper . . .

Every day when you unfold your newspaper, there before you is the panorama of life . . . with all its Air Force Wins tragedy and comedy . . . realism and romance beauty and ugliness . . . truth and deception . . . irrestible because it is the running story of the miracle of mankind.

Newspapers play to a greater audience than any medium of information or entertainment.

The daily newspaper is part and parcel of the life of every community. No other medium is so intensely local in character, because no other medium can cover, or pretends to cover, such a wide range of the people's local interests.

In every city . . . it is the newspapers that turn the light of publicity on all things, both good and they were trailing 32 to 5. But bad. They keep a watchful eye on local and national affairs. They expose abuses, inspire reforms and organize sentiment.

Newspapers are also the life-blood of retail trade. They move more merchandise from dealers to con- tories and two losses. sumers than all other advertising media in the world. Ninety per cent of all advertising is done in game with 12 points, made all newspapers.
