PALMER WINS

was still in there dishing them out as wel las taking them when the final bell sounded.

Good Preliminaries

Outstanding fighter in the series of three round preliminaries was Bill Porayko of the Boilermakers' Athletic Club. A welder at the Dry Dock, this was his first public appearance in the ring and, if he maintains the promise he showed when he won over 160-pound Bruno Dober of the United States Army by a technical knockout in the second round, he should go a considerable way.

Outweighing Dober by three pounds, Porayko put the American lad on the canvas for the count of four at the end of the first round. In the second Dober was chopped to the canvas twice and, when the bell sounded, his seconds threw in the towel, yielding Porayko a T.K.O. This was the briefest and most decisive bout on the card.

Bill Wallace, a U.S. Army 160-pounder, scored a T.K.O. in the final minutes of his three round bout iwth Claude Abbott, a colored Canadian Army boy of 163 pounds. Abbott made small use of a number of opportunities in the escond round, although he did lay home a couple of good ones.

A body punch late in the final round sent Abbott to his corner, and Wallace took the bout by a T.K.O.

Heaviest fighters on the card —Les Geving of the U.S. Army and Canadian Navyman Art Lemerieux—battled to a draw in three blood-stirring chapters that set the fans wild.

Both weighed in at over 170 pounds, yet they set a pace faster than one usually sees in light heavyweights. Blows were frequent and hard, Geving stopping an exceptionally juicy one at the end of the first round.

The boys began to tire by the end of round two, and round three was largely given to the dispensation of haymakers, none of which, fortunately, hit any of the fans.

Abram Lider's semi-windup victory over Young Tommy Burns of the Canadian Army was a good fight to watch. There was plenty of speed and clean, sometimes savage action. But the four round duration brought no decision in the ring, so the judges gave Lider, a U.S. Army man, the honors on points.

Also included in the preliminaries were two non-decision bouts by youngsters training at the Boilermakers' Club in the East End Hall. Jackie Williams and Gerry Parrell started things off with three one and a half minute rounds, and later Johnny Daniluk and Ray Ingham staged a bout of similar length.

The battle royal, staged by seven young trainees was amusing.

Brick Skinner, a man of earlier renown in the squared circle, refereed all the preliminaries briskly and impartially, making certain that there was plenty of resin on the canvas, and none on the gloves. Billy White refereed the feature bout. Timekeeper was Bob Cameron, Dry Dock superintendent.

Master of ceremonies Peddy Stanton supervised the amenities with a supreme glibness.
