DAILY EDITION — Friday, February 18, 1944

The Christian Principle . . .

More and more are we hearing today advocacy of the viewpoint that the way of living exemplified by Christianity — although possibly not exclusively by Christianity—will have to be the keynote attitude of all men if permanent peace is to be achieved after this war. And we are hearing the necessity of the "do as you would be done by" attitude being advocated by hard-headed, practical realists who are coming to realize that there can be no security unless man is willing to keep in bounds with his fellowman and trusts his fellowman to do likewise with him. Many difficulties in international affairs which seem nigh unsurmountable today would be quickly dissolved if this attitude were honestly applied by men and nations in their dealings. Not so many people as before are today dismissing the Golden Rule as mere Sunday School talk exclusively for the use of young children.

We don't subscribe to the general opinion that cheerfulness and good nature tends to lengthen the individual life span. We have observed that sourpusses die rarely and tardily.

Civic Centre . . .

The Prince Rupert Gyro Club has gone on record in a realistic and sensible way as enunciated in the resolution passed by the club this week advocating that $25,000 of existing civic centre funds be kept in clear reserve against the purchase of the Y.M.C.A. war services building which, by agreement, is to be acquired after the war at a price to be negotiated. This amount should be kept intact and apart from any interim project such as swimming pool or skating arena.

The Gyro Club is correct in taking the stand that the civic centre itself is the first objective and this would be always kept in mind when considering any other project that may be subsidiary to that civic centre. It would be derelict, the Gyro Club rightfully feels, to take the fund that has been raised for the civic centre and sink it into a swimming pool without regard to the obligation which is implied in the deal now closed whereby the Y.M.C.A. war services building will be taken over after the war. It would be better to have no swimming pool at all than be unable to handle the financing of the civic centre building itself when the time comes. No doubt the central committee will agree with the policy as laid down in the Gyro resolution and govern itself accordingly.

Shed a tear for the girls. Here it is Leap Year and no men to chase except those who are "either too young or too old."

Juvenile Delinquency . . .

The commissioner of British Columbia police, T. W. S. Parsons, who, incidently makes special reference to Prince Rupert, says that the primary cure for juvenile delinquency rests in the home. We merely repeat our own views as expressed on more than one occasion in agreeing with the commissioner. Too often, as we have said before, parents are inclined to blame the community for existing conditions existing when they themselves are remiss in their own parental responsibilities.

Whether or not Commissioner Parsons was justified in pointing to Prince Rupert as an especial example of juvenile delinquency conditions may be questioned. We may not be any paragon of perfection but we do not believe we are a Sodom.

In some respects it may be better to give than to receive, but one can win more friends by judiciously asking favors than by bestowing them.

WIVES OF GENERALS—

ONE CAREER IS PLENTY

Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington's Wife Says One Public Figure Is Enough in any Family.

By Helen Bannerman
Canadian Press Staff Writer

BARRIE, Ont., Feb. 18 (CP)—Being a soldier's wife and the mother of two lively children was career enough in peacetime for Larry Worthington, wife of one of Canada's foremost generals. Now her husband is overseas and the children away and she finds that her work as "shopper" for the Barrie, active service canteen and as past president of the women's auxiliary to the Canadian Armored Corps doesn't keep her "nearly as busy as I'd like to be."

Small, chic and with a little grey in her slightly up-swept black hair, Mrs. Worthington has been living at Barrie since 1939, her longest stay in one place since her marriage to Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, then a captain, in 1924.

She says one public figure is enough in any family so she has made a career of being the wife of one of Canada's experts on mechanized warfare and has accompanied him on most of the busy military life. Her hometown is Toronto but since her marriage she has lived in Winnipeg, in England, Winnipeg again, Ottawa, London, England, again, Camp Borden and Barrie.

The Worthington's son, Peter John, now 16, and their daughter, 14-year-old Robin, always accompanied their parents. Their mother felt that becoming seasoned travellers would more than make up for breaks in their schooling. Both children now are away from home at school.

Mrs. Worthington finds the postman's ring a welcome sound —especially when he rings a double peal which means a letter from her husband, commander of an armored division in the United Kingdom. Mail forms a major part of her life but neither she nor her husband writes by schedule. Mrs. Worthington generally writes twice a week, sometimes more often.

"Worthy (that's the general) is a pretty good correspondent, considering how much he has to do," she said. "I feel very sorry for the young wives and sweethearts of men overseas because when mail is held up they worry. They may even feel bitter. But those of us who have been married some time have a background of mutual love and trust to fall back on in times like that."

Every room in the Worthington home reflects the general and his career in pictures, in the signed mess plates on the telephone table inside the front door, in the large-scale map of Europe hung above the telephone, and in the detailed model of "Old Faithful" — a remarkable truck put together by the armored corps at Camp Borden and guaranteed to overcome any obstacle. The 15-inch model, exact in every detail, was presented to Gen. Worthington by his troops.

The present-day problems whether a navy or army or air force wife should follow her husband as he is moved worries Mrs. Worthington with the shortage of housing and other difficulties facing young wives and families. She has seen at first hand the grief that often comes in the train of moving service families, but she believes there is another, brighter side to the picture which generally goes unnoticed:

"I think it has done a world of good for the girls married to servicemen to move about with them and get an idea of how the other half of the country lives.

"I loved the west and, being an eastener, I had never realized what difficulties many westerners were up against until I went to live there for a while."

ACTIVITIES OF Y.M.C.A. AND Y.W.C.A.

By DOROTHY GARBUTT

Tonight Gordie Webb is holding his juke box jive session at the Empress. It's an informal couples dance, no orchestra, just the juke box and a good selection of swing records. Make this your Friday night date.

There are long dreary patches in my days lately. All my cribbage partners seem to have taken to the woods. I think I'll have to ask some of the American boys to teach me pinochle (peanuckle to you) one of these days. I've always threatened to learn. They say it's like Bezique and back in England I used to play Bezique by the hour with my brother-in-law and love it. Of course, it's strictly for cokes or coffee.

The Y.W.C.A. Service Wives' Club met Thursday afternoon in the ladies' lounge at the "Y." There were fourteen members and ten kiddies present. One new member, Mrs. Webb, was welcomed to the club and, of course, also little Miss Judith Webb. Judy's mother was telling that, although she is only two and-a-half years old, Judy has already travelled over ten thousand miles going with her daddy from posting to posting. The raffle was donated by Mrs. Kaye and won by Mrs. Young. Tea was served by Mrs. Garbutt and Mrs. Strand.

S. C. Thomson came up to the "Y" the other day to ask me to let the girls of the three services know that they are very welcome to visit his home any evening, play cards or the radio and make themselves a snack in the kitchen. There are two service couples living in his home so the girls could be sure someone would be in each evening. Mr. Thomson's daughter is a Wren, and, therefore, he has a soft spot in his heart for the service girls. Arrangements for going up could be made through me or by phoning directly to Mr. Thomson's home.

LETTERBOX

SOCIAL ENTERPRISE

Editor, Daily News.

In your issue of February 15 I read with interest the editorial based on the address by D. Archibald McDonald of Montreal in support of private enterprise. About twenty different categories of industries were enumerated to the credit of private enterprise. This, I admit, is a fact but the record would be more complete, I believe, if we justly added the eight year depression from 1930 to 1939 and the present world war that it has taken to eradicate the depression. Private enterphise, like the ox cart, has served its purpose and now must give way through economic stress or natural law, to social enterprise, if human society is to move onward and upward to where every working man will be a capitalist and every capitalist a working man. Yours for progress.

GEORGE B. CASEY.
