ROMANCE IS COMPLICATED

Mystery and Romance in 'Whistling in Brooklyn' at Capitol

Romantic complications as well as a murder mystery tangle the adventures of Red Skelton in 'Whistling in Brooklyn," showing this Wednesday and Thursday at the Capitol Theatre. Ann Rutherford and Jean Rogers are the girls who make life complicated for Red when a beautiful reporter appears on the scene to cover Red's marriage to Ann and decides to annex Red herself.

Red plays a radio actor who solves the most unbreakable crimes under the title of "The Fox." Just as he and his pretty sweetheart and assistant, Ann Rutherford, are leaving for their honeymoon, detectives appear on the scene with instructions to pick up Red. He is wanted by the police on the strength of a tip sent in by "Rags" Ragland, Red's self-appointed publicity agent who is long on ideas but short on brains, that he is the "Constant Reader," a desperate criminal wanted for murder.

Red eludes them thinking they are joking and then the real criminals step into the picture. Their object is to get Red out of the way permanently in order that the case may be forgotten. Red determines to get to the bottom of the mystery and goes to work. He uncovers vital evidence and after a series of hilarious adventures succeeds in rounding up the criminals single-handed and ends up a hero in Ann's arms.
