Local firemen kept their hand in practice on Sunday by putting out a fire which broke out while one of their trucks was being filled with gasoline from the pump in front of the fire hall. The engine of the truck had inadvertently been left running while gas was being poured into the tank and, when some of the fluid was spilled, a fire resulted. It was extinguished before any damage was done to the truck.

Porterhouse Steak

Now that meat is free, what about a juicy porterhouse steak

Broiled or pan-broiled, a steak dinner is definitely something to set before the boys as they come home on leave.

Now for broiling! Preheat your broiler. Slash edges of fat at close intervals to prevent curling. Place steak 3 to 5 inches from source of heat. For medium done allow seven minutes for each side for a one-inch steak and proportionately more for thicker steaks. Serve with mushrooms and a leafy green vegetable on the side.

CARVING A PORTERHOUSE STEAK

Place the steak on the platter with the bone to your right. If possible use steak carving set. First, remove the bone by cutting round it and lifting out. Now carve across full width of steak, making wedge-shaped portions each of which contains part of the tenderloin. Note: Steaks are the only meats carved with the grain.
