BRITISH CASUALTY—ITALY—A British infantryman brings in a casualty from the Savio river area. After the fall of Cesens on Oct. 19, the river Savio was the next obstacle in the path of the Eighth Army to the Lombardy Plains. Most of the bridges were blown up by the Germans and it was with considerable effort that the British were able to construct Bailey bridges across the span.

TO GUIDE FROM WAR TO PEACE

Sir C. Bruce-Gardner is Virtually Industrial Dictator Of Britain

LONDON, Nov. 30 (CP)—The man who is to guide the change-over from wartime to peacetime production in British industry is Sir Charles Bruce-Gardner, an industrialist and planner whose list of positions reads like a business guide to Britain.

For the last two years this little heard of man who is virtually industrial dictator of the country has been a member of the Council of the Ministry of Aircraft Production—his particular job there being Controller of Labor Allocation and Supply and Chairman of the Production Efficiency Board.

His new job with the Board of Trade is styled "Chief Executive for Industrial Reconversion," but, just for the record, here are some previous positions he has held:

He was a member of the Air Minister's Industrial Advisory Board during 1938-39, the Air Council Committee on Supply from 1939-40 and the Air Supply Board in 1940-41.

Previously he was a member of the Institute of Mechanical Engineers and Chairman of the Society of British Aircraft Constructors and also was for some time a derector of many industrial companies. He has also been chairman of the Iron and Steel Industries Research Council, a member of the Advisory Committee of the Department of, Overseas Trade, Industrial Advisor of the Governors of the Bank of England and Managing Director of the Securities Management Trust Ltd.

Sir Charles, who is 56, has been described as Britain's No. 1 industrial adviser. At the Board of Trade it was stated, "He will be the brain behind the planning of our change-over. Once the Minister of Labor releases the manpower we will swing into peacetime production. That will be Sir Charles' job."

Nurses Overseas—

Are Happy When Busy

Canadian Sisters Marvellous In Caring for Wounded

By Margaret Ecker
Canadian Press War Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Nov. 30 (CP)—Chief of Canadian nurses in Europe is an animated, intelligent little person, Major Mary Schaffner of Toronto and Halifax.

Major Mary Schaffner who is probably one of the smallest nurses here in the trim blue uniform has seen service in North Africa and Sicily before she came to the Western Front.

She considers it all a great experience but essentially a job to be done and she doesn't talk much of her adventures, except to comment that the Sahara was extremely cold at night and hot in the daytime.

"Conditions in Africa weren't easy, neither were they in Italy," she said. "But the girls were marvellous through all the campaign. I think that they are more adaptable to living conditions than men are."

She's proud, naturally, of the work the Canadian nurses have done in France as they chased the front line through Normandy, France, Belgium and now almost into Holland.

"They have worked hard in this theatre," said their matron. "Until only recently they lived in tents with all the discomforts of that kind of life, but they have all been amazingly well, and most of them never looked healthier."

Anyone who has been with Canadian hospitals over here knows that working conditions first in the heat and the flies, later in the rain and the mud, weren't easy.

"But the sisters never tell me of their difficulties. They aren't the type who complain," said Miss Schaffner. "They are happiest when they are busy. And when they are really busy, with a convoy of wounded coming in, it's hard to make them even rest. They want to keep on at their jobs."

"Most of them come from large modern hospitals in Canada with the most scientific equipment. It was quite a change for them working here with little water, no heating, often no light."

Canadian nurses now serve with casualty clearing stations which are often only two or three miles from the front line and the sound of the guns is never away from their ears.

"But the girls seem to work well under fire," said their officer. "They enjoy the hectic life with a C.C.S., they know what a valuable job they are doing there."

Since the nurses first came to France in the middle of July only two have returned to England.
