WE'VE A JOB TO DO

More ambitious men of Prince Rupert are won- pert decided last night to lend dering whether this port city will have a share—a western railway outlet for the fair share-of the development and prosperity be- Peace River 'Valley. The poring talked about for the northern and central sec- of Prince Rupert would be the tions of British Columbia.

They are asking each other on the street whether we will not retrogress in the post-war years instead of going ahead or at least holding our own.

This is a good sign, although the local point of have the schools board and al. that the Dominion Government view is clouded with a little too much pessimism. other civic activities brought guarantee the war risk on the There is a hesitancy here that seems to spring from and have the members of the in order that she may be put couver's business section and Wills Moody defaulted to Helen C. N.R. EMPLOY the fear that individual eagerness and enthusiasm city council an unpaid body. back on the Rupert run. The practically wrecked—not a china Jacobs in the final match for the to move mountains will bring ridicule.

Prince Rupert was cut from the stone slopes of Kaien Island, a formidable undertaking, by men who basis. had vision and courage to attempt to make a dream come true. The First Great War changed Dominion policies and all benefits were showered on Vancoucer, rather than shared between that port and this. It was a bitter blow, one from which Prince Rupert never recovered.

For years Prince Rupert has been regarded as the poor relation among cities of this province, Not an enviable position. It need not be. Two-fisted determination by our people, publicity and go-gettiveness can shape our future. It only remains for us as individuals and as organizations to take off our coats and go after those things we want.

But just what does Prince Rupert want?

There is one way to decide that. Let's form a community council with representatives from all city organizations. Have these men and women meet, decide on a tentative program and report back to their respective organizations, meet again and then strike study committees to gather data on each

As this is going on let's name a livewire publicity! man for Prince Rupert. Give him an equally live assistant, being careful only to name such men as have enthusiasm and a vision, even though foggy.

Let's count our blessings here. They will surprise us. Let's gather all facts and figures we can about ourselves and our port city, then tell every town in British Columbia and the large cities of Canada and those in the West Coast states.

Make our leading citizens public relations counsels when they travel. Make hundreds and thousands Prince Rupert conscious.

Make contact with industrial and trade leaders at Vancouver. Ask them how we can share more fully in things to come. By asking their advice we will get their interest and by playing our cards with enthusiasm we can imbue them with some of our enthusiasm and thereby enlist their support.

The City of Edmonton has a wide-awake chamber of commerce that made Ottawa conscious of its importance and potentialities. We can do the same. We might well tie in with Edmonton as we are both northern gateways. Let's ascertain from Chicago how by their efforts they made their city the great hub it is.

To get anything worthwhile - such as we at present vaguely wish for Prince Rupert-takes work -real work, and sustained enthusiasm. Let's get at it. Let's follow up the Skeena Highway opening with the launching of a new prosperity campaign.

But is this picture too fantastic? Will the development take too long, and will it be too much work? The Daily News does not think so. Enthusiasm begets enthusiasm and no effort toward community development is ever totally in vain.

Let the senior and junior Chambers of Commerce call a joint meeting and discuss the idea. Let's make the name of Prince Rupert known at home and abroad. Let's learn about our possibilities, what others can do for us provided we can interest them sufficiently-and then let's get going.
