STAMP AUCTION NETS $12,900

NEW YORK, Nov. 24 (CP)— At the Philatelic Victory Auction in New York for the benefit of the National War Fund, the sale of stamps raised $12,900.

One of the lots was an' Iwo Jima stamp plate autographed by AP Photographer Joe Rosenthal, who took the famous flag raising picture featured on the stamp. It was bought for $39 by Alfred F. Lichtenstein, New York importer, and was the first such item ever offered for sale.

Prince Rupert creditors of the bankrupt Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Engineering Co. gained advantage over the Vancouver creditors in their struggle to have the bankruptcy proceedings held at Prince Rupert when it was learned proceedings filed in Vancouver were begun improperly. Consequently, A. H. Bain, representative of the Vancouver creditors, took a trip to Prince Rupert.

A new-fangled Republic truck was in Winnipeg getting painted and lettered in preparation for its use as a delivery truck in a new delivery service to be inaugurated by the Canadian Express Co. and the Dominion Express Co. at Prince Rupert.

Poor condition of the city's streets inspired an editorial comment to the effect that it would improve the appearance of the city "wonderfully" to have Second and Third Avenues paved with asphalt.

TWO TORONTO TEAMS BATTLE FOR EAST TITLE

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP) — A crowd in the vicinity of 19,000 crowded the stands in Toronto today to see Toronto Argonauts and Toronto Beaches fight it out for the eastern Canada Football championship and the right to meet the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the annual East-West classic.

Both teams have expressed hope for a fast, dry field. That the Beaches should want a fast track has mildly surprised some of the sideline experts. The sporting fraternity points to the Beaches' 15 to 2 triumph over the Toronto Indians on a rainy field last Saturday. What goes? No more of the same? But evidently Coach Ted Reeve has it figured differently.

And while the betting boys who earlier set up the Argos 8 to 5 favorites mull this one over. They must also consider Reeve's flat prediction of victory. The moaner has long been known for his conservatism and his victory statement has somewhat confounded the odds-makers.

"We'll win because I have the right men and the right system to stop a razzle-dazzle outfit like the scullers," was Reeve's comment.

The Beaches' line-up is almost free of injuries, despite the rough and tumble final with the Indians. But the Argos are not so well off, with Fred Doty and Andy Tommy definitely out and starry Royal Copeland listed as a doubtful starter.

SPORTS

The English Boat Race is back again on the tideway. The announcement thrilled thousands of race fans who expect to line the Putney to Mortlake course next March 30 when Oxford and Cambridge eights row it out on this route for the first time since 1939. War-time races were held at Oxford, Cambridge and Henley. The race was first held in 1829, when Oxford won easily on the 2¼-mile stretch of river between Hambledon Lock to Henley Bridge. Since then, Cambridge has won 49 to Oxford's 42, with one dead heat in 1877. The pre-war custom of having new boats built for the event will not be observed. Oxford will hold trial eights at Henley December 8, and the Cantabs trials will be later. Milk and eggs will replace the customary steaks and beer on the training menus.

Leonid Meshkov of Leningrad, Russia's most famous swimmer, has been burning up London pools while attending the World Youth Conference here. His records, not recognized outside Russia, which does not belong to the International Swimming Federation, include five which better European marks, and two are faster than world records. Last August Meshkov swam 200 metres in two minutes 8.9 seconds, three seconds father than Arne Borg's European mark. In 1941 the Russian set five records: 200 metres, free style, two minutes 9.2 seconds; 300 metres, three minutes 26.5 seconds; 400 metres, four minutes 45.4 seconds; breast stroke, 400 metres, five minutes 38.4 seconds (world's record five minutes 43.8 seconds; 500 metres, seven minutes 16.6 seconds (world's record seven minutes 16.6 seconds). Trying to get the Russian champ out of the water almost created an international incident at the pool. No one knew the Russian for "Time, gentlemen, please," but sign language finally worked.

One hundred pairs of stones for curling will be sent by the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, Edinburgh, to men of the 51st Highland Division and Canadian troops in Germany, to be used this winter. During the war the club supplied stones to officers of the 51st Division who were prisoners of war in Germany. They played the roarin' game on the moat which surrounded their castle prison.

RUP-REC - News -

Today at 5:45 p.m. Rup-Rec goes on the air. This is the first program of Rup-Rec on Parade, so listen in, recreation fans. Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Insulander, manager of the local radio station, it is hoped to have a regular radio spot, covering news and interviews on Prince Rupert's recreational front. Be sure to tune in at 5:45 tonight and learn about your recreational movement.

This little story emerged from the junior boys' class of last Wednesday night. It appears that the baby of the class had retired to the washroom to change into his outdoor clothes. Three of the leaders came in a few minutes later, talking, and not paying any attention to the little fellow. However, they were suddenly made acutely conscious of him when, with his clothes draped about his small person, he shot into the shower, and, from behind the curtain, announced furiously, "I'm not going to dress with you men watching!"

Iron Men?—Weightlifting and barbell training are fast becoming pastimes of widespread importance. According to a recent edition of Life magazine, which featured John Terpak, a national and world titleholder in the "iron game," there are close to 1,000,000 weightlifters in America today. If there is enough interest in weight training around town, a Rup-Rec barbell club will be formed.

CHRISTMAS CARDS — WRAPPING — SEALS

McCUTCHEON PHARMACY

CHRISTMAS IN BERLIN SCANT

BERLIN, Nov. 24 (CP)— Haustraus standing in potato queues will do most of Berlin's Christmas shopping this year.

They won't be bothered with fixings for the Christmas turkey. There'll be neither turkey nor fixings because the Allies are having a difficult time keeping Berliners a jump ahead of starvation.

Shopping for Christmas gifts isn't done in Berlin any more. Only businesses dealing or bartering in life's essentials are open.

A stroll down Kurfuerstendamm, emphasizes why there is no Christmas spirit in this dead city.

Gone are imposing establishments, with their gleaming chromium and their liveried doormen. Distorted segments of sheet roofing and coping sway in the chill winter wind against the hollow insides of bombed and gutted ruins.

Off Kurfuerstendamm, in Tauentzin strasse, is the battered Arnold Mueller store, the city's biggest children's store before the war. Pick your way through a bomb shattered, stanchion supported archway, across a glass littered expanse and you come to a back door. There in a single room Arnold Mueller is open again.

"What have we to sell?" repeats the old woman shopkeeper. "We have nothing to sell. We only mend and make over."

Across the street are the ruins of KDW (Department Store of the West). Women bucket brigades are ladling off the rubble.

Such bucket brigades are familiar all over Berlin. If your ration card shows you work, you get more to eat. That's the important thing in Berlin today.

Before the spirit of Christmas gave way to the urgency of dodging bombs and satisfying hunger, Santa Claus wearing colorful costumes to suit his taste, came to see the kids on December 6, bringing gifts to those who were good, scoldings to those who were not.

The Weihnachtsmann (Christmas Man) wearing the flowing white beard and red suit made it a double affair by showing up the night of December 24 with sweets.

A soft-hearted soldier with a weekly ration of chewing gum and candy is Santa Claus at any time in any language.

TOO MANY WAR PLANTS

Australia Can't Sell Factories Built in Country During War

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 24 (CP) — Efforts of the Australian government to sell war factories in country towns, one of its schemes for decentralization of the population, so far have been unsuccessful.

Half of Australia's people live in the six state capitals and one of the post-war plans of the administration is to spread the population across the country but manufacturers do not want the country factories even when they are offered cheap.

Premier Chifley recently told in an address of efforts to induce the British Nuffield firm which proposes to build motor cars in Australia, to take over the big factory at Orange, near Bathurst, a town of 10,000. They refused to buy even when the price was set at next to nothing and plan to have their plant in Sydney, the largest city in the country.

Mr. Chifley said that he was very keen to keep these factories, built with the taxpayers' money, going, but that it was sheer delusion to think that companies were willing to go to the country.
