Utility Costume Fashion Keynote British Designers Acopt Many Devices to Meet Need for Economy

LONDON, March 1 (P)-Dresstransforming gadgets intended to make one dress do the work of two or three were features of fashion show here.

Boleros of flower-printed mat quarter of a -century's standing erials, parti-colored apron panels and long jackets convertible in moment into a bolero were among devices shown.

The flowered boleros are intended to enliven plain black dresses. One little black dayfrock with a matching bolero, on display at the show, became an almost backless dinner dress by removing the bolero and adding a ground-length overskirt, open down the front and attached to a flexible belt.

Flowered overskirts were used with plain-colored frocks, and a with feelings of deep apprecia gathered panel made from alternating squares of pale blue and pink georgette served first as an apron front on a black gown and
