"ALL QUIET"—BUT CANADIANS KEEP ALERT ON THE WESTERN FRONT—While great battles swirl to the south where Field Marshal von Rundstedt made his first big counter-offensive on the western front, Canadian troops have settled down to a virtual duplicate of the trench warfare of the last Great War. Everyone is constantly on the alert, however, to counter ony new move from Jerry, and patrolling actions by both sides are the order of the day and night. Here are two pictures taken on the Canadian sector. At left, Pte. Bill McConnell of London, Ont., is preparing to toss a hand grenade after pulling the pin with his teeth, while at right, three Canucks stand on the alert in the dug-out gouged from an earthly bank. The men are Pte. Sam McClymont of Sarnia, Ont., Pte. Bill McConnell of London, Ont., and Pte. Ron Weir of Annapolis, N.S.
