Must Still Fight for Victory . . .

While it might be reasonably assumed that the collapse of Nazi Germany may come any day now in view of the serious military position of the Reich with the Russians moving in from the east so far almost unchecked and the western allies undoubtedly preparing to open a major offensive when the physiological moment appears to have arrived, it might be well to remind ourselves of a definite possibility that the Nazis themselves might have a last minute surprise in store. The war, of course, is nearing victory for our forces but there may well have to be some hard and vicious fighting yet as the enemy at bay puts up his death struggle.

For Adolf Hitler and his cohorts it must needs be a battle to the last against the defeat which necessarily means personal doom in a simple physical way. How long the Germans will continue to uphold and fight for Hitler remains to be seen but that they will turn upon him sooner or later is elementary logic. Meantime, as long as he is able to retain any measure of control, the war will go on.

Any danger of our defeat has, of course, been long since removed. We are now engaged in the final and important effort of clinching the victory as rapidly as possible.

Interest In North Grey . . .

Never has a federal by-election commanded more general attention than that which culminates in Grey North on Monday next. It has been a battle of the giants as far as the political leaders are concerned since the national leaders of both Progressive-Conservative and C.C.F. parties have campaigned the riding personally and Prime Minister Mackenzie King has sent special messages to the voters there. The riding has not suffered from lack of blandishments and assurances.

The government has chosen to make a testing ground of the riding. Should General McNaughton be defeated, no matter how special the circumstances of that defeat may have been, it would be a serious blow to the prestige of the government. And the government, there is no denying the fact, has a real fight on its hands for strong cases have been put up against it.

The candidates opposed to General McNaughton have certain advantages. The Conservative candidate, Garfield Case, enjoys a high measure of personal esteem and is the only bonafide resident of the riding. Air Vice-Marshal Earl Godfrey is a nationally known figure through his long and good service with the Royal Canadian Air Force. That will be an advantage for him.

The political eyes of the Dominion are indeed centred on the riding bordering the shores of Lake Huron where anything may happen next Monday.

The Conservative Choice . . .

Popular local young professional man and officer in this war since the outset, serving overseas for the past few years, Major James T. Harvey has been nominated Progressive-Conservative candidate for Skeena in the forthcoming federal election. He enters the contest enjoying the esteem and respect of many friends and his party may consider itself fortunate in having obtained a candidate of his standing and personality. For years he has been a bonafide resident of the riding which he seeks to represent at Ottawa. His business and all his interests are here. He is the type of candidate which any party might consider itself fortunate to have and, if the people decide by their votes when the election comes that the party and policies which he represents are acceptable and to their best interests, Skeena would not suffer, we are sure, through the representation he would give at Ottawa.

Maintaining Local Highway . . .

An interesting announcement was made at the annual meeting of the Terrace Board of Trade this week by Edward Gurney, chief highway engineer, who stated that the federal department of mines and natural resources will maintain and keep the new Prince Rupert Highway in a first class condition. We hope that this will be a continuous policy to be carried on not only for the duration of the war but permanently afterwards. After all, the local highway was conceived and born as a national project and, war or no war, might well be regarded as such for all time. Certainly, it would appear to be in a category more than a mere provincial road.

Newspaper Talk . . .

Perhaps you are one of those who has heard the remark "Oh, that is only newspaper talk," in regard to some incident or occurrence being discussed in a group or gathering. What those who utter such remarks, fail to understand is that newspapers in the main make an earnest effort to present a true picture of day to day events to the best of their ability.

We have found that newspapers contain a fund of reliable information far in excess of the cost of the public. While the charge is often made that newspapers tend to exaggerate, most like the Dominion-wide news gathering agency, Canadian Press, tend to be conservative in the extreme.

For those who take the trouble to check closely newspapers are the mirror of the community in which they are located. While the news they contain may seem of only passing interest, they in fact record for all time in tangible form events that constitute the current history of the community.

Members of the H. M. C. S. Chatham band held a farewell banquet in the Commodore Cafe last night in honor of six of their number who are leaving Prince Rupert. Five of the six, Tom Roe, George Dutton and George Ariss, all of Toronto, Albert Darch of Bowmanville, Ont., and Redman George, of Neepawa, Man., are leaving for sea duty. Ernest Saunders of Toronto, having transferred to the seaman branch, is going east for training. A committee consisting of Eandmen Long, MacKay and Peebles was in charge of the arrangements. FISH LIVERS ARE PRIZED

UNRRA Now Taking Valuable Vita. in Oils Derived from Once Despised Dogfish

Valuable vitamin oils from the liver of the once despised dogfish, the small shark that infests waters off this part of the coast, are now being supplied to UNRRA for delivery to the liberated countries for the use of people who have long suffered hardship and starvation under Nazi persecution. Canada has agreed to send 100,000 gallons and already 21,000 gallons has been shipped. Most of Canada's vitamin oils have been going to Great Britain and the United States as well as Greece.

Fish liver oils, rich in vitamins A and D, have been one of Canada's major contributions since the beginning of the war. When Denmark was invaded, Britain's normal butter supply was cut off and had to be replaced with vitamin fortified margarine. In addition, the fact that cod liver oil could no longer be imported from Norway, which Germany seized soon after Denmark, put a premium on Canadian vitamin oils. This led to redoubled research, and valuable livers were discovered among fish that only a few years before were considered not worth saving.

"BARBARY COAST GENT" AT CAPITOL

Wallace Beery and Binnie Barnes Having Leading Character Parts

An exciting film of the old Barbary Coast and Nevada goldfield days, "Barbary Coast Gent," with Wallace Beery in the title role and Binnie Barnes taking the feminine lead, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre next Monday and Tuesday. Beery is a bunco artist on the Barbary Coast with whom Binnie Barnes, owner of a gambling house, is in love. Mixed up in a shooting, Beery is run out of town. On the train to Nevada he meets a financier and, arriving at his destination, lets the townsfolk think he is a financier. He sells mining stock to the citizens but the money is stolen before it can be invested in the mine. Beery starts robbing stage coaches to recoup the money for the mine which finally proves to be a rich strike. There is a dramatic ending.

Frances Rafferty and Bruce Kellogg provide the young romantic interest and other leading members of the cast are John Carradine, Ray Collins, Donald Meek, Noah Beery sr. and Chill Wills.

Bottles were used for the first time in England during the 18th century for the purpose of maturing wine.

New Refrigerator Scow Docks Here to Load Frozen Fish—Pity the Poor Herring

A floating refrigerator scow, the only craft of its kind operating on the B.C. coast, is moored at B.C. Packers wharf loading frozen fish for transit to Vancouver. Owned by B.C. Packers, the scow has a capacity of 250,000 pounds. It arrived here under tow by the packer M.H. on Wednesday and is expected to return south shortly. Loaders were busy Friday stacking frozen fish into the floating refrigerator, piling the ice-glazed carcasses in the same manner one pile cordwood. The cargo includes salmon, halibut, ling cod and red snappers. Built last year on experimental basis, the scow embodies economy of space in its design. The cold chamber is about 30 by 60, and the freezing unit is at one end, taking up a space about six feet long and the width of the scow.

Charles McKinley, formerly third officer of the steamer Prince George, has left that position and is now third officer on the Park Steamship company's deepsea freighter Montebello Park. The position on the George is now filled by Harry Wright, formerly third officer on the coastwise freighter Amur. Sydney Free, who was formerly second assistant purser on the Prince George has been transferred to the dock freight office at Vancouver and his position has been taken by Charles Holt, who has been the ship's wireless operator. Hedley Randall, wireless operator on the Amur, is now on the Prince George.

The herring, whose present downcast habitat is the mecca of innumerable seine boats and packers, has a tough life. Aside from the fact that his carcass metaphorically suffers the indignity of being dragged across the paths of politicians, he is the victim of just about every other creature who comes in contact with him. He is wolfed by larger fish who attack him from the deep. He is gobbled by sea gulls who pounce on him from the air. And he is scooped from the sea in nets and consigned to a variety of awkward destinations. He is put in cans. The picture of a free-roving creature of the seven seas ending its days in the confines of a tin can is a bit suffocating. The herring must find it so. Sometimes his destiny achieves a bit more interest. A herring with a touch of imagination ought to take pride in knowing that ultimately he will find favor with the human race by being in a pickled state. In that he has achieved the advantage over most humans who, when they reach the same condition find themselves the subject of the raised eyebrow. Also he is shoveled into reduction vats and boiled for the oil his silver body contains, while at the same time his brothers repose frozen in refrigerators to be used as bait to lure greedy halibut onto long line fishing gear. Once a year through some instinctive process, herring gather for their isolated occupations and collect in great schools in coastal waters for the business of spawning. It is then that they really receive punishment. Seine nets scoop them from the sea by the hundreds of tons. Larger fish congregate around the schools and grow fat. One purse seiner alone pulled in 500 tons in one set off Vancouver Island. I contained an estimated 3,000,000 fish. But against all these deprivations the herring has an eatable defence—he knows how to produce—in quantity. The packer Dominion has here Friday to unload about of a 120 ton cargo of herring freezing after peddling to the Nelson Bros. cannery at Edward. She unloaded at the Packers wharf here.

SMITHERS BOY IN WAR ACTION
SMITHERS, Feb. 3—In a recent issue of "The Maple Leaf," which is a Canadian soldiers' paper printed overseas, is carried an account of a raid by a party of Canadians from the South Saskatchewan Regiment on a German strong point. The party killed a number of Germans and brought back some prisoners. Among those mentioned as being in the Canadian party was Sergeant Guy Ludgate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Ludgate of Smithers.
Guy Ludgate was one of the well known young athletes of Smithers, being a star hockey and baseball player. He was attending school in Saskatchewan when he joined the army and visited his home on embarkation leave last fall prior to going overseas.
He has been with his regiment in France since D-Day.
