Canada and U.S.— Friendship Is Cemented By Atomics

Canada, U. S. Brought Closer Together While Rest of World Torn by Differences

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON ©—In a post-war world torn by dangerous internal differences and deadly intra-national strife, the old friendship between Canada and the United States remained unshaken through the momentous days of 1945.

If the year of victory, and the problems of victory, brought any change it was to draw the two great neighbors even closer together.

It was apparent that the abrupt change of administration in the United States caused no weakening—or threat of weakening—in the bonds of understanding and co-operation firmly cemented under the Roosevelt regime.

There was one circumstance contributing to a closer union of their common interests—their sharing with Britain in the secret of applying atomic energy to create a destructive agent which makes its possessors potential masters of the world.

Canada lost a warm and consistent friend last April in the death of President Roosevelt. His successor, President Truman, probably knew little more

To My Friends and Customers

THIS is the last time before my retirement from business that I will be wishing you

Christmas GREETINGS

But, in doing so, I wish, in all sincerity, to express my keen appreciation of your patronage through the years.

That my successor in business will warrant and receive similar consideration and patronage is my further wish.

The Season's Best Wishes to You All.

AUXILIARY FILLS 150 DITTY BAGS

The local Women's Auxiliary of the Navy League of Canada, at its last meeting with Mrs. E. J. Rutherford, the president, in the chair, completed the filling of 150 ditty bags for merchant seamen, the most of which were distributed to ships in port. The Auxiliary will have a dance on January 11 for all returned navy boys as a welcome home affair.

about Canada than the average American. But Mr. Truman, seeking to preserve in almost every way the ideals and objectives of his predecessor, at once sought to improve his relations with Canada.

He invited Prime Minister Mackenzie King to visit him and make himself as much at home in the White House as he was during the long Roosevelt regime.

Truman to Pay Visit to Canada

The two national leaders met for the first time at the United Nations organization conference in San Francisco last June. Mr. King spent several hours at the White House when he was en route to England in the fall, and in November he and the president and Prime Minister Aitken held their momentous conference here on the future of atomic energy secrets.

President Truman has never visited Canada as president but he has been in Windsor and in Winnipeg on brief trips in earlier years. Now, the president says, he is looking forward to making "a real visit" to Canada as soon as the pressure of urgent responsibilities permits.

Throughout the war Canada and the United States worked together almost as a unit in the Anglo-Canadian-American combination to throw their economic strength behind the effort to defeat the Axis.

Questions of trade policies and tariff barriers were pushed into the background. Now they will have to be dealt with in the light of existing proposals for the removal of selfish and unnecessary commercial restrictions between nations. There is no immediate indication that these discussions will produce any sharp conflict between the traditional friends.

In the coming age of atomic power and lightning-fast development of high-speed air travel, Canada's northland becomes a strategic area for the whole American continent.

MOOSE LODGE'S CHRISTMAS TREE

Annual Christmas tree party sponsored by the Moose Lodge and the Women of the Moose was held yesterday afternoon in the Oddfellows Hall. About 150 children attended, receiving immense enjoyment from the program, and the distribution of gifts by Santa Claus. Role of that round gentleman was filled by J. T. Murphy, Moose Lodge secretary. Following the program refreshments—hot dogs and soft drinks—were served by the Women of the Moose. Mrs. F. W. Grimble headed the committee in charge.

of that vital area for the benefit of the hemisphere, supplying the scientific and other facilities necessary to keep pace with the demands of peaceful traffic and the contingencies of possible attack.

The Canada-United States joint permanent defence board, set up by Mr. King and President Roosevelt at their Ogdensburg meeting in August, 1940, remains a going concern.

There is a likelihood that its immediate aim will be to integrate the defence forces of the two countries in respect of equipment and training so that if the need ever arises, they can operate as one unit in defence of the continent, using standardized equipment, armament and tactics.

Canadian interests in Washington were guided through the difficult year by Ambassador L. B. Pearson, who is addressed by president and state department officials alike as "Mike," probably the only instance of that kind in diplomatic history. Probably no diplomat in the capital enjoys to a greater degree the confidence and trust of the United States administration.

Christmas 1945

An historic Christmastide, this—with the great conflict ceased, the world looking to established Peace, and families united again in joyful thankfulness for deliverance and return . . . With a pledge in our hearts to those who will not be here to celebrate it, let us meet this Christmas with happiness, and face the New Year with a resolve to work all together for a better year, a better future.
