A Lament

All through the pale mists of this chill April dawning

As we mingle our tears with a Nation's proud mourning

We weep for a friend, for a smile, warm and human

For the strength of a will that has yielded to no man

Sleep-noblest of men-in the daylight's last beaming

The Standards of Nations shall droop o'er thy grave,

For the soul of her Warrior-the heart of her Brave.

For the hand on the helm through fierce, war-driven seas.

And join with the Star-spangled Banner's bright gleaming

That lighted the world with its vision of Peace;

The stars of Old Glory Groop low on its staff,

For a Leader whose life was his own epitaph.
