CHURCH HAD CLOSE CALL

Damage estimated at $2000 was done by fire on Sunday morning to St. Peter's Anglican Church at the native village of Kitkatla, down the coast from here, according to word received in the city today. Fire damage was largely confined to the basement although some flames seeped through to the church auditorium which suffered more from the effects of smoke and ected:

The fire broke out about 9:30 after a youth, Johnson Gordon, had lit the hot air furnace which heats the church. Gordon had gone home to change and, on returning, saw flames issuing from the basement windows. He immediately raised RED CROSS the alarm and a large proportion of the village population was soon out fighting fire first with water buckets and then with the village fire pump. The efforts proved successful in saving the building and church service was held as usual.

Hector Ridley had a vein cut in the back of his hand son suffered minor hand burns. Following adjustment of inceeded with.
