rural schools, and $180,000 to school teachers was now $1318 year and the minimum teachers' salary set by law was Issuance of a free school magazine was one method o assisting the work of teachers and helping to make the rural school a more effective agency in the life of the district. Disschool was encouraged, the department bearing 50 per cent of Four new schols have been built along the Alaska highway north of Fort St. John and it is expected that a vote for eight new schools which is scheduled to be called for at the next session of the legislature will have to be expanded. These schools will be distributed throughout the province.

Reading of carefully selected passages of Scripture in schools was authorized by the government and "over a period of time these readings will familfarize children with the best passages of Holy Writ."

Consolication of rural schools has also been encouraged by the department which feels that consolidation of rural districts results in improvement of educational facilities and a uniform rate of taxation in the districts involved.

While 277 of the province's 661 school districts are managed by official trustees, the department would prefer to have the citizens elect their own trustees, the minister said.

"We encourage elected trustees rather than official trustees because we feel that indifference to local responsibility eventually results in a psychosis for government control. Citizens who indolently fail to exercise their responsibilities have taken the first step toward losing their rights."

The Minister concluded with brief comment on the work of provincial Rehabilitation commission, of which he is! chairman, and of the provincial archives, library and museum, which come under his depart.
