Fifth Game

HOW TIGERS WENT AHEAD

Newhouser's Steady Pitching
And Greenberg's Hitting
Spelled Ruin for Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP)—A record-breaking post-war crowd of 45,000 fans which absolutely jammed beautiful Wrigley Field in grand sunny fall weather was on hand Sunday to see the home club tripped up 8 to 4 by the Detroit Tigers in the fifth game of the World Series. The victory gave the Bengals a three to two game edge over the Little Bruins. The Tigers scored the four winning runs which started the tide turning in their favor in the sixth inning when Hank Borowy went to pieces by yielding four safeties to Detroit stick-handlers. It was a sad rout from then on for Charlie Grimm and his men who tried to stage uprisings in seventh and ninth innings but had too much against them by that time. Grimm used five pitchers in the game and a near record number of 17 players for a single World Series game.

Big Hank Greenberg was again the hero of the bleachers along with pitcher Hal Newhouser as the Bengals settled well behind the courageous pitching of Newhouser who was particularly good in the pinches and fanned nine Cub batters. The heavy slugging of the Tigers was featured by three two-baggers by Greenberg and Roy Cullenbine's great double, the longest hit ball of the series which became stranded in the ivy above the stands.

Pafko's speedy fielding in the centre garden featured Chicago play although it was his error in letting Doc Cramer's single pass between his legs and go for a double that started the disastrous scoring parade of the Tigers in the fatal sixth inning. It was then that the big guns of the Tiger batting order—Cramer, Greenberg and Cullenbine—clicked for successive hits to pile up the hits and runs which drove Borowy from the box and which confounded succeeding relief pitchers' H.V. Vandenberg, Bob Chipman, Paul Derringer and Frank Secor.

Winning pitcher, Newhouser; losing pitcher, Borowy.

every threat while Hank Borowy had stifled the Tigers from the ninth on.

The game was loose all the way, the Cubs committing three errors and the Tigers two.

A crowd of 41,708 watched the game.

It was the longest game in World Series history, lasting almost four hours. Stanley Hack equalled the record for three errors for a single player in a single World Series game.

The series resumes at Detroit tomorrow for the seventh and deciding game.
