How About the Reserve Army?

The Prince Rupert Regiment will conduct a campaign for much needed new recruits next week. The Reserve Army has been assigned new and important responsibilities in the defence of this coast.

with themselves whether those reasons are conscientiously valid and decide accordingly in the matter of joining the local reserve unit.

If there are any who are inclined to think that an active and trained Reserve Army is not needed, they might consider a statement made by Major General G. R. Pearkes, V.C., general officer commanding in chief, Pacific Command, during an inspection of the Reserve Army at Victoria at late as Thursday night of this week.
