British Ration Levels . . .

In view of the resumption of meat rationing in Canada, a summary of the ration situation in Great Britain is of interest.

In Great Britain, the ration level has been reduced to a point lower than that prevailing at any time during the war years and the maintenance of even these low levels will be extremely difficult in respect of meat, bacon and cheese.

The amount of food allocated to liberated countries by the Combined Food Board diminishes the supply in the world pool from which Great Britain may draw her requirements unless the exporting countries can still further increase their shipments.

United Kingdom officials estimate that, even if all their present contracts for meat from other countries are filled, they would still want from Canada during the last half of 1945, well over 400,000,000 pounds of meat in order to provide Armed Services, supplied from Great Britain, with their priority needs and to maintain present British ration levels.

A survey of the bacon position shows that even if the present bacon contract is completed it will still be about 34,000,000 pounds short of requirements and will be 16,000,000 pounds short of satisfying present British bacon rations which are now the lowest since the outbreak of the war.

A report of a committee of the Combined Food Board, issued recently, gave the information that "further reductions in the United Kingdom diet would give rise to apprehension about possible effects on the work output health, and morale of the civilian population."

The "Outbreak" of Peace . . .

With rumors, reports and events, pointing to the possibility of an end to the Japanese war earlier than most had dared hope, the nation finds itself none too well prepared for an "outbreak" of peace. Too many of the measures designed to cushion the shock and provide an orderly change-over from a war to a peace economy either await consideration or are stalled.

Some fear the men who would do the planning or would carry out the program. That was an understandable reaction of conservative thinking when there was a sharp turn to the left at the depths of the depression. But one does not have to approve everything that has been done to observe that the more frantic fears should be dispelled by now.

The same men who man the federal government, whether all of the nation likes all of them or not, are going to have to carry out either the haphazard product of diverse and often conflicting pressures, or some sort of considered and integrated policy. The economic dislocations of war are too great to permit expectation that all the pieces will fall neatly and automatically into their old accustomed places at the sudden coming of peace.

The choice of methods should not be as difficult as some succeed in making it.

VALUABLE MEDICAL DOCUMENTS

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—More than 32,000 medical volumes, ranging from the writings of Hippocrates to original manuscripts by the late Sir Frederick Banting, and Dr. Charles H. Best in which they announced their discovery of insulin, are housed in the Toronto Academy of Medicine Library at Queen's Park here.

Visitors to the library may see irreplaceable volumes such as a 13th century medical manuscript in Latin shorthand on sheepskin with black and red ink lettering still distinct.

Among the library's prized documents is a first edition of a book by Dr. Edward Jenner, discoverer of smallpox vaccination, who announced in 1789 results of his experiments with cow-pox vaccine. In a foreword to his first edition, Dr. Jenner denounced as unhealthy the "lap dog" fad practised by wealthy socialites of the day.

High 18th century living, Dr. Jenner complained, resulted in man's familiarizing himself "with a great number of animals which may not originally have been intended for his associates."

"The Wolf, disarmed of ferocity is now pillowed in the lady's lap. The Cat, the little Tiger of our island, whose natural home is in the forest, is equally domesticated and caressed."

Most carefully preserved treasure is the hand-written, original manuscript of Sir Frederick and Dr. Best announcing their discovery of insulin in treatment for diabetes. The announcement was made to the Academy Feb. 7, 1922, with Dr. Banting reading the paper and Dr. Best showing slides to illustrate various points.

Modern Etiquette

By ROBERTA LEE

Q. When interrupted in the middle of a business conversation by the telephone, is it all right to ask the person to "hold the line?"

A. It is better to explain and ask if you may call again in a few minutes.

Q. When a man takes a woman to dinner, should he give her order to the waiter before giving his own?

A. Yes, always.

Q. Who should act as hostess when a woman's club is giving a luncheon?

A. The president of the club.

16th century literature, it keeps abreast of the development of medical science by obtaining about 400 books a year, half of which are gifts by physicians and their estates and the remainder purchased on recommendation of a library committee.

The library sends many of its publications to medical officers continuing their studies during the war.

"During the past year we have mailed 570 books, mostly to medical men in the service," says Edna Poole, librarian.

THE Weeklies Say...

Watch Your Step

The last few weeks have again seen a large increase in the number of accidents on farms and in homes. Some of them are due entirely to carelessness and might have been avoided.

Justifiable Criticism

Many of our townspeople are criticizing some local merchants for their catering to the tourist trade, particularly in those commodities that are either rationed or in short supply in their own country. If these merchants are selling these goods to strangers and not keeping sufficient stock to meet their local customers, then our own people have every justification for criticism.

Guard Water Supply

With so many heavy rains lately, it would be well for users of well water to have their wells examined and tested. This is particularly advisable concerning wells at summer resorts.

Post-War Matter

We can't figure out what will be done to use up gasoline when the war is entirely over. Between the Normandy invasion and the surrender of Germany approximately 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline, oil and lubricants were delivered daily to army depots and air bases on the European continent.

V-J—Vinegar Joe

The Japs' apprehensiveness must have increased with the redoubtable General Stilwell's assumption of an active command in their near neighborhood. They must realize that now the ominous initials V-J stand not only for victory in Japan, but also Vinegar-Joe.

A Pat On The Back

One day last week a visitor with an observing eye stopped to tell John Lunn, the man who has charge of keeping our streets clean and clear of debris, how nice the Kentville streets looked. Said the stranger: "No matter what job you are doing it is important and worth doing well. I like to see a man who takes his work seriously." He passed on and left a better feeling in the heart of the workman. We are all human, and a word of appreciation makes the world a bit brighter.

Movies Outkissed

In these days of heroes returning from the war zones you can see more kissing scenes at the railway stations than at the movies—and they're thoroughly genuine.

—Summerside (P.E.I.) Journal.

During the warmer months of the year the ant works hard to find his food. But he is always careful to lay away a generous portion which he does not touch until he really needs it. And so, because he is wise he survives. Each of us has the opportunity to buy and put away Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps. Let us continue to do so regularly. And let us be sure to keep them until we really need them.
